July 4 carnival cancelled

Will Wilmington have a carnival on the Fourth of July?

The likelihood of a carnival being held in 1988 plummeted recently when the Fourth of July Committee voted to drop the carnival from the town's activities during the week of the Fourth.

The carnival had been a popular draw at the high school parking lot since 1980, when the town celebrated its 250th anniversary.

The carnival became a hot question before the board of appeals two and a half years ago when the new high school gymnasium occupied half the parking lot where the carnival has set up. The Fourth of July Committee at that time proposed to move the carnival to the lot between the Swain School and the Fourth of July Headquarters. Neighbors on Powderhouse Circle, however, did not want the carnival in their back yard. The carnival was again set up at the high school, with the construction site fenced off.

Last year, the carnival issue was debated again before the board of appeals. The permit was granted for the operation of the carnival, but many concerns were expressed.

The Fourth of July celebration had grown to a very large affair, attracting some 15,000 people. The primary attractions for the majority of this crowd were the fireworks and the carnival.

Other components of the celebration are conducted by various clubs in town, who serve dinners on the common and sponsor concerts. The Fourth of July Committee holds athletic events, as well as a doll carriage parade and a bicycle parade. These events take place over the period of several days, attracting crowds in the hundreds.

During the celebration, Church Street, Route 62 has been blocked off, with traffic routed along Middlesex Avenue, past the Fourth of July Headquarters. Both roads are key thoroughfares in town.

Without the carnival, the entire celebration can be held on the common and on the Middlesex Avenue side, with no crossing of Church Street.

One issue which amplified the opposition to the carnival was a controversy over graphic materials used as prizes at some of the carnival concessions.

During the 1987 carnival, members of the Fourth of July Committee visited booths in the carnival and asked the concessionaires to remove items from display which could be constituted as sexually suggestive.

Carnival owner Larry Cushing Jr. objected to the committee approaching the concessionaires directly, rather than going through him. He defended the graphics as being the same materials used as prizes by the carnival in other locations.

A subcommittee of the Fourth of July Committee was instructed to come up with a contract for the

Reading Light votes million dollar refund

Excess profits earned by Reading Light will translate into a million dollar refund for rate payers.

The Reading Light Board voted last Tuesday night to refund a total of $992,500 to its customers. Of that total, $312,800 will go to residential customers and $679,700 to commercial customers. The balance will go to streetlighting accounts.

General Manager Leonard Rucker said the refund is a result of a profit over the allowed eight percent of the plant value for the year ending October 31. Each year, the department must forecast its power expenses and load growth to determine its rates. Expenses for the past year were lower than projected, and the load growth higher.

An Oct. 21 ruling by the Mass. Dept. of Public Utilities on the calculation of the profit had little effect on the refund. Under that ruling Reading Light must deduct depreciation from the value of its property before calculating its profit.

Analog studies energy alternatives

by Arlene Surprenant

Analog Devices is one of three or four Wilmington companies looking into cogeneration and building its own plant, possibly in conjunction with Compugraphic.

Cogeneration plants produce steam that powers generators and heats buildings. This form of energy is considered, by many, to be one of the most economical and efficient ways to eliminate predicted shortages in electricity in the near future.

Analog Facilities Manager Richard Mitchell stressed he has only taken the first step in this direction.

"I'm not sure of the whole picture yet," he said in an interview this week. He said he is learning more about cogeneration and probable savings for his company and is entering into negotiation with the Reading Municipal Light Dept.

Mitchell recently sent a letter to RMLD General Manager Leonard Ruecker seeking a reduction in rates in order to avoid a bypass of the electric company. Under PURPA (Public Utilities Regulatory Policies Act) regulations established by the federal government in 1978, companies are encouraged to develop alternate energy production. Mitchell added that the regulations establish the mechanics to allow industries to negotiate "some special arrangements" with the power company.

Mitchell maintained that cogeneration will have no effect on Wilmington ratepayers. What it will do is reduce costs for his company should officials decide to go that route, he said.

With cogeneration, the power provider would buy back any excess power generated at replacement costs. In this case, said Mitchell, the power provider could be Reading Light or a Wilmington light department, should the town purchase the RMLD distribution system.

Early dismissal Dec. 10 in Wilmington

There will be an early dismissal day for all Wilmington public school students Thursday, December 10, 1987.

Dismissal time for the intermediate schools and the high school will occur at 11:25 a.m. Dismissal time for all elementary students (K through five) will be at 12 noon. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions. Morning kindergarten students will remain in school until 12 noon on the 10th.

Lunches will be served to all students grades one through 12.

Shopping at school Everyone is busy with Christmas shopping, even kindergarten children. As in many schools, the Woburn Street School PAC is helping children with their shopping by holding "Santa's Secret Shop." Marlene O'Rourke gets some help with her shopping from Brenda O'Brien.

A secret no more Keith O'Brien couldn't resist showing Jason O'Connell what he had bought at Santa's Secret Shop.

Low income homes ready

by Arlene Surprenant

It was a long time in coming, but the eight low to moderate income homes subsidized under Chapter 705 are finally ready for occupancy. The beleagured homes were built on town owned land scattered throughout Wilmington, including in the so-called Lost Colony area.

Members of the Wilmington Housing Authority (WHA) learned last week that occupancy permits were issued for the homes by Building Inspector James Russo. And according to member Dan Gillis, all eight homes have been reserved for Wilmington residents for over a month.

True to form there continue to be a few minor glitches. The state Executive Office of Communities and Development, for instance, had promised to deliver house keys last Wednesday but failed to do so. As a result, Chairman Kevin McMillan took matters into his own hands and installed his own locks and provided other keys to the homes.

Gillis said WHA members are also concerned with the expense of electric heat being used in the homes. He said his board will have to find some way to underwrite the cost.

Refrigerators and stoves are expected to be delivered today, added Gillis, and now "it's going to be go, go, go."

"It's been a long road. After seven years I hope we'll have some nice Christmas presents to give out soon," said Gillis who anticipates the eight families will be in their new residences before the end of the year.

WHA members will now apply for $140,000 through EOCD for two other low to moderate income homes. The homes are being built off Nichols Street by developer Peter DeGennaro, who will sell them to the housing authority for $65,000 apiece, said Gillis. Though nothing is definite at this point, he added, the housing authority could either rent the homes or turn them over to a non-profit corporation for affordable housing.

Road closures and a traffic light

Changes planned for Tewksbury center

by Bill Conlon

Tewksbury's town center will be going through some changes in the near future, thanks to state funding secured by state Rep. Jim Miceli.

A state appropriation of $350,000 to fund the project was signed by Governor Mike Dukakis as part of the fiscal year 1988 budget and plans are now being formulated for the changes.

Rep. Miceli visited Tewksbury town center on Tuesday to show the area to the state engineer who will be overseeing the work.

The proposed changes will be dramatic.

Pleasant Street will be widened under the proposal, with a traffic light installed at the intersection of Pleasant and Main Streets.

Common Street will be closed, loamed and grassed over between the fire station and Main Street, and the horseshoe drive for town hall will dead-end near the fire station.

There are currently three ways of turning south from East Street onto Main, but the new traffic plan would only allow one, using the lights at Pleasant Street. The small strip of road which now allows right turns from East Street onto Main will be removed and grassed, and a larger traffic island will be installed on East Street to forbid left turns.

An informal meeting was held in the town hall driveway on Tuesday. On hand to discuss the project with Miceli were Selectman Paul Sullivan, Fire Chief James Morris, planning board member Wilfred Lambert, appeals member Lou Carciofi and DPW Superintendant Bill Burris.

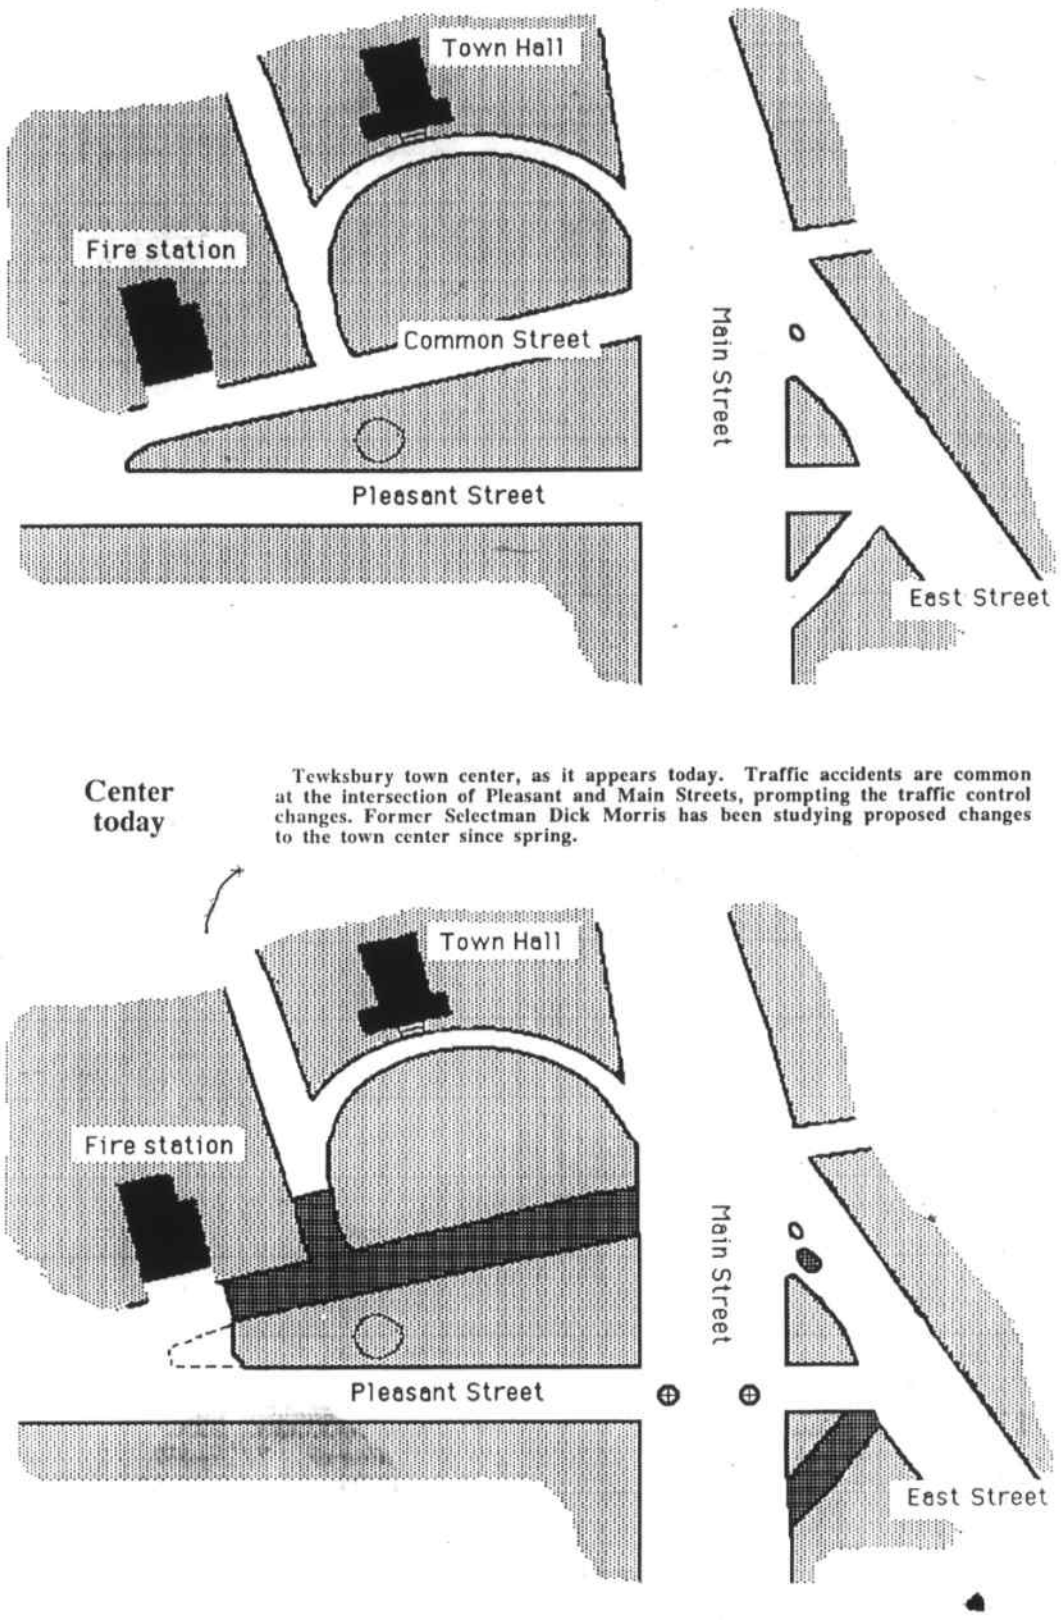

Also on hand were former selectman Dick Morris, who has been heading up the Tewksbury Town Center Committee, and Alfred Laing, district projects engineer for the state DPW. Laing will be in overall charge of the project, in part due to Main Street being a state road (Route 38.)

The Tewksbury Board of Selectmen this week publicly thanked Morris for his efforts in planning the town center changes.

The project still has a few hurtles to cross, including a review of the historical aspects of the common and what effect the traffic changes might have.

Also under discussion is a set of yellow flashing lights on Pleasant Street, to block traffic for emergency vehicles coming out of the fire station.

Laing said the town center proposal will be put out for competitive bidding before any work begins, but said there is not yet any timetable set for the work.

Tewksbury town center, as it appears today. Traffic accidents are common at the intersection of Pleasant and Main Streets, prompting the traffic control changes. Former Selectman Dick Morris has been studying proposed changes to the town center since spring.

With $350,000 of state funds now available to purchase traffic lights and pay for studies, the town center will be changed as follows: Common Street will disappear, and the two halves of the town common will be joined into one. The strip of road allowing right turns from East onto Main Street will also be closed and grassed over. A corner of town common near the fire station is slated for removal, to better allow emergency vehicles to gain access to Pleasant Street. The intersection of Pleasant and Main have a traffic light, and the island at the end of East Street will be enlarged to prohibit left turns.

Inspector requested

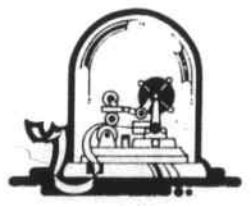

The Tewksbury Board of Health seeks to have an assistant for Bill McMenimen, Director of Public Health for Tewksbury. The need was discussed on December first with the town personnel board, in the town hall.

Several tentative positions were discussed. McMenimen told the board that the work load is getting "too heavy," and he needs someone to serve as an assistant, and who would be capable of taking his place during absences such as vacations. Possibly a student in his fourth year of study to be a sanitarian could be the answer, McMenimen said.

Among the possibilities job titles also discussed were an animal inspector or a restaurant inspector.

Chestnut Estates II
Questions raised on canal, traffic impact

by Arlene Surprenant

Drainage and high water, impact on the Middlesex Canal, and increased traffic were the main concerns of Butters Row residents and the Middlesex Canal Association at a planning board hearing on Chestnut Estates II Tuesday night. The 30 lot definitive subdivision abuts its 17 lot counterpart, Chestnut Estates I, and is being developed by Northeast Development Corp. off Chestnut Street and Butters Row.

Approximately 15 abutters came out to express their views, even though chairman Carole Hamilton said the hearing would be continued to January 12 to give the town's engineering consultants a chance to turn in their findings on the plan. Many of the concerns mentioned are also expected to surface at tonight's Conservation Commission hearing on the same subdivision.

Engineer Ken Miller said the 30 homes would tie into the town sewer and use town water. There would be granite curbs and sidewalks on both sides of the subdivision, he added. A water and sewer impact study will also be required by the Water and Sewer Commission.

Many neighbors questioned Miller's plan to direct surface road drainage to lot 23, which is adjacent to the historic Middlesex Canal. Neighbors sought reassurance his plan wouldn't increase flooding problems in and around their homes and negatively impact the nearby canal. Miller said he will put in an earthen dam and a weir (concrete structure) to restrict water flow and keep runoff potential the same as before.

Butters Row resident Herbert Fielding explained that when his wife Julia and her father gave that portion of the canal to the Middlesex Canal Association, it was with the provision that it be kept in its original condition. He said he was afraid the increased water flow to lot 23 would disturb plant life in the canal and damage its structure.

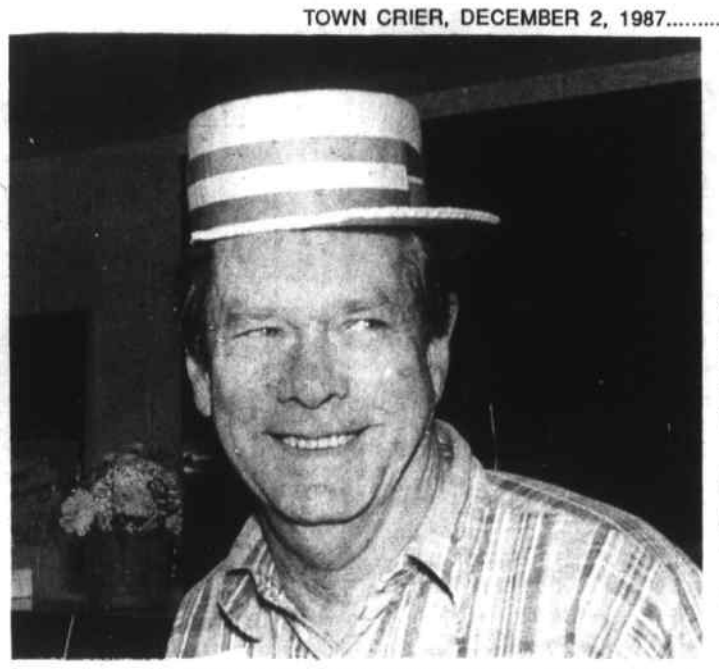

Col. Wilbur Hoxie of the Middlesex Canal Association raised similar concerns. He claimed the high velocity of water could erode the canal structure to the point it could dam up the canal. He said water could also destroy storage in the canal, create a nuisance if it remains standing there year round, and weaken tree roots and cause some uprooting of trees. He charged board members to give the plan "serious thought" and to ask proponents to devise a better way to divert the water.

Susan Earls was only one of several Butters Row residents who spoke on the traffic situation and drivers who speed and pose a danger to area children.

"They fly down the road," she said, adding that by allowing Butters Row to access the property, the board was creating a "dangerous problem." Others explained with the road being used as a shortcut to Burlington Avenue, there was enough of a traffic problem there already. They said they preferred other alternatives such as a suggestion by Betty Bigwood to dead-end the main subdivision road midway to cut down on through traffic.

Hamilton said her board would consider Bigwood's suggestion. She added members would also consult with town engineers on the impact to the Middlesex Canal and with the safety officer for help with traffic problems.

Planners have until February 4 to review the plan, go over comments from other boards, and reach a decision.

Breakfast While others were eating pancakes, Ed Nash had a breakfast treat of his own. Actually, the broken hat was borrowed from Harry Cunningham for the Wilmington Rotary Club pancake breakfast, Thanksgiving morning.

Volunteers sought for emergency Planning Committee

Health Director Greg Erickson is seeking two Wilmington citizens with some expertise or background in hazardous materials to join a newly formed local emergency planning committee on a voluntary basis.

The committee will meet once a month to develop emergency contingency plans for chemical users, manufacturers, and storers. Eventually, the committee may get into the development of local regulations, licensing, and inspections. Representatives of local chemical companies will also be a part of the committee.

Anyone interested in serving the town in this area should apply either to Erickson or Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski at the town hall by December 15.

CHECK YOUR INVESTMENT FOLIO NOW

It isn't smart to make investment decisions for tax reasons only, but it is advisable to consider tax consequences when you make buy-and-sell or when-to-sell decisions. This year, long-term capital gains will be taxed at no more than 28 percent. Next year they will be taxed the same as ordinary income -- and the effective rate will be 33 percent of those whose taxable income is between $71,900 and $107,000 (for couples; between $43,150 and $100,480 for singles). If you plan to sell, it may make sense to consider selling now.

Short term gains are something else. Because they're already taxed as ordinary income, it may pay to wait to cash them in until January 1, when your tax rate will be several points lower.

Both long-and-short term losses can be used to offset gains, or up to $3,000 of ordinary income dollar for dollar. One big reason to sell losers now is that the losses are worth more of a tax break this year than they will next.

Frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

It's about this time of year that Beacon Hill closely resembles Down Town Crossing at Christmas time. With the 1987 legislative session drawing to a close, there is a great deal of activity with a number of lobbyists and legislators praying their bills won't die. And, some of the bills have been more interesting than others. In this category has been the debate concerning weekend furloughs granted to prison inmates convicted of murder.

The issue first came to light because of a prisoner named William Horton. Last spring, Horton, who was serving time for first degree murder in a Massachusetts prison, was temporarily released as part of the ongoing furlough program.

Unfortunately for a Maryland couple, William Horton proved true to his past nature. While on his furlough, Horton broke into the Maryland home of Clifford Barnes. After tying Barnes up in the cellar and beating him, Horton began to rape Barnes' girl friend, Angela. When his rampage was finally completed, Horton stole Barnes' car, only to be apprehended by Maryland police, who captured him after a shoot out.

When tried for his crime before a Maryland judge, Horton was given a life sentence, with the court promising never to send him back to Massachusetts where, the judge said, they are too lenient.

The state legislature quickly jumped into the act, and took a close look at the furlough program.

After the Horton case, State Rep. Larry Giordano (D-Methuen) filed a bill calling for an end to furloughs for prisoners convicted of first degree murder. Following this, two committees in the House began long and detailed studies of the issue. The Giordano Bill was first referred to the Human Services and Elderly Affairs Committee, where it was reviewed for three months. Human Services proposed the furlough program be tightened up, though furloughs for first degree murderers should not be ended all together.

Next, the Post Audit and Oversight Committee began hearings which produced proposals that State Rep. Geoffrey Beckwith described as "very comprehensive".

But on this past Monday, both of those committees took the back burner to a floor fight led by State Rep. Jim Miceli. Miceli debated in favor of the Giordano bill, which bans furloughs for first degree murderers entirely. In an interview with the Town Crier, Miceli said that, "A person who takes another persons' life shouldn't be eligible for furlough."

Miceli was acting on behalf of the Ways and Means Committee, which had endorsed the Giordano bill on a 10 - 2 vote. On Monday, the bill easily passed by a 119 - 30 vote in the House Chamber, sending it to Bills in Third Reading.

But State Rep. Geoffrey Beckwith was one of the minority votes cast against the Giordano Bill. Beckwith questions the hasty move by Ways and Means to endorse the total elimination of furloughs, and described it as a "simplistic bumper sticker approach to the issue."

Beckwith cited statistics that of 4,908 furloughs granted to first degree muderers from 1972 to 1976, which represents under 400 convicts, only eleven resulted in escape; with only three of these occurring in the last three years. "That's a .05% escape rate", said Beckwith, "which is lower than the overall prison escape rate of .5%".

Rep. Beckwith went on to say that,"Without furloughs, prisons will probably be more dangerous, and general programs will suffer. If 'lifers' are never given even a weekend, you'll find they will be more violent, and there will be greater rates of escapes."

As an alternative to the Giordano Bill, Beckwith calls for a stricter screening program for potential furlough candidates, and greater supervision.

Commenting on his wide margin of defeat in the bill vote, Beckwith said, "We knew we'd get whipped, but I think there are a lot more people who felt like voting for the Human Services and Elderly Affairs Committee version. But when push came to shove, the Legislature didn't make the tough decision."

The prospects for the bill in the Senate look very good, and State Senator Bob Buell said that the furlough system "hasn't been very well managed." However, Buell raised another issue tied to this which has been mentioned by Republicans in the House, and that is the death penalty. Referring to William Horton, the convicted murderer who terrorized the Maryland couple while on furlough, Buell said, "He should have got the chair."

Chances are that the couple in Maryland wished there had been a Giordano Bill a long time ago. Or perhaps instead, capital punishment in Massachusetts.

25 years ago

The December 6, 1962 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

Town Manager Harold Melzar was pictured at his desk as he purchased a box of candy from Camp Fire Girls Susan Gilbert and Carolyn Simmons.

Building permits to the first of December in Wilmington totaled $2,063,200 including two radar towers built by Avco for the government at a declared cost of $115,000. House construction was up 24 percent over a year ago with 110 dwellings started during the year.

Kingdom Hall was scheduled to be dedicated by Jehovah's Witnesses December 15 and 16.

Guests planning to attend the American Legion Christmas party were asked to take an exchange gift worth 75 cents.

Patsy's Farm on Main Street was advertising Christmas wreaths for 98 cents and up and asked that patrons purchase their Christmas turkey early.

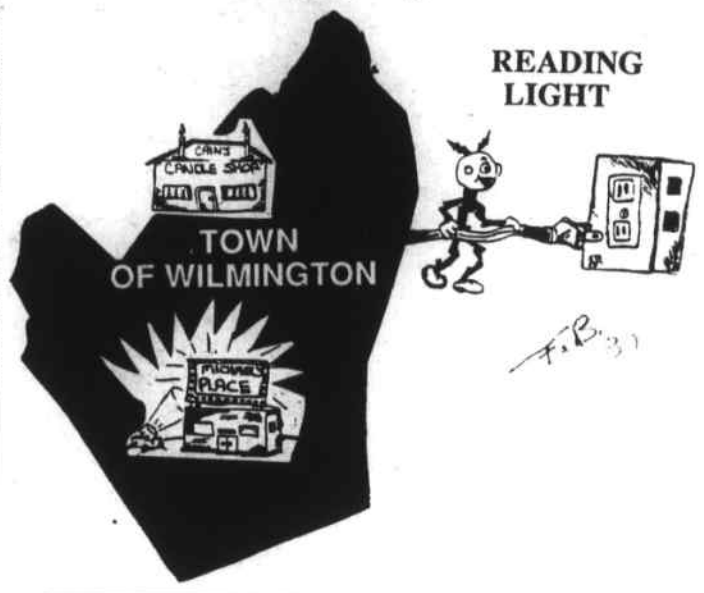

Odors in South Wilmington, "prevalent a few years ago, but not in recent years," became a subject of discussion by the board of health. The board had received reports that there were several odors seemingly from different sources and stronger during the weekend. The board instructed sanitarian Ernest Romano to get topographical maps of the area in order to trace the source.

Pictured doing clerical work at a successful blood drive in Masonic Hall were Dawne Burns, Carol Hastings and Vivi-Ann Linde as donors James Forman, Ralph Stimpson and Jay Tighe waited in line. A total of 135 volunteers gave 110 pints of blood.

Airman Dennis DeLucia, son of Mrs. and Mrs. Joseph DeLucia of Beech Street was assigned to Wright Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio.

The high school girls basketball non-league game was won handily over Westford 41-23. Peggy Montague was co-captain while members of the team included Judy Halpin, Esther Corum, Marlene Galka, Maria Fevera, Dolly Chapman, Lucy Huston, Linda Boeri and Cynthia Corum.

What the season is all about

by Arlene Surprenant

Only 22 shopping days left until Christmas.

For many shoppers that translates into 22 days of panic as they run from store to store, list in hand, and impatiently wait for service, which somehow seems slower than ever at this time of year. Gone, for the most part, are the small courtesies and pleasant faces. In their place are elbows rudely poked in sides and a determination to complete shopping chores in record time. For Christmas shopping, folks, has turned into serious business.

Wherever you shop, the retailers seem to feel it's easier to part with your money if piped in holiday music fills your ears. It isn't. Nor is it likely that pink glass balls dangling from fancy white trees or animated Santas that have seen better days will tempt you to give up your hard earned cash. They won't.

Initially, though, shopping could be considered fun as you are filled with the spirit of giving. You easily locate the first few presents on your list and still don't feel pressured by the passing days.

Two or three weeks into the season is another matter. By this time you are willing to spend almost anything to cross Great Aunt Sally's name off your list and get out of the store's confines. You groan as you think of the stacks of cards to be addressed and the cookies to be baked at home. Eventually, you are tempted to give up the search altogether and settle for a gift certificate or the new gold American Express check which comes in several denominations.

Trying to choose just the right gift for friends and relatives can be one of the most frustrating aspects of the whole season.

Heading almost everyone's list has got to be some kind of cuddly stuffed bear. No matter where you look this season, there they are hanging on walls, propped on counters, under tree displays, and lolling in oversized bins. You see them at Filenes, Bradlees, Stuarts,Zayres, and even as part of a cereal box offer. The best bear, though, aside from the unbeatable Felix of Filene's fame, has got to be K-Mart's cute offering bedecked in a red or green hat labeled 1987 with a scarf to match. Really now, what little kid or teenager could resist?

Following last year's trend with Teddy Ruxpin, talking dolls and TV characters are more popular than ever. My daughter, for instance, can't wait to hold her first conversation with Alf. That's probably because the rest of the family are too busy to hold more than a five minute conversation with her themselves. These talking dolls become instant friends and promise hours of enjoyment for the lucky recipient, providing their recorders don't break down first.

Also new on the toy scene are such big attractions as the Feed Me game patterned after the greedy plant in Little Shop of Horrors, dolls in flower pots, an array of Ghostbuster's paraphenalia, scooters, electronic contraptions, and a selection of more creative Transformers.

If you're like most adults, however, you probably lean toward the old stand-bys like Monopoly, dolls that do absolutely nothing, bikes, sleds, puzzles, and books. These toys never seem to go out of style and, surprisingly, are played with long after the season is over.

The hardest people to buy for seem to be elderly relatives and those who have everything. For these people on your list, a gift of service or your time may be most welcome. For example, one of the nicest presents you can give is an offer to help put those piles of old photos in a special album. As you sift through the treasured pictures, you and your relative will find yourselves reminiscing about past events which may have long slipped from memory.

Gifts come in many forms. As you count down the next 22 days, keep in mind that there is one way to beat the shopping crunch. There is one way to avoid the crowds; the repetitive carols, loved though they are; and feelings of impatience, frustration, and panic. That way is to resolve to give the gift of yourself. There is no better way to learn what this holiday season is all about.

Dear Larz:

The Board of Selectmen wish to recognize and commend the efforts of those people involved with the installation of lights at Glen Road field. However, far too many people were involved to mention each one individually. There are several people to whom we would like to extend a special thanks.

Jim Cushing, a member of the Pop Warner Board of Directors spearheaded the plan to bring lights to Glen Road field. Jack Virtus contacted Reading municipal Light Department to bring the electrical service. Robert P. Palmer, superintendent of public works and his crew spent many hours assisting with the installation. Leonard Howard, president of Wilmington Pop Warner coordinated the efforts of the volunteers.

John R. Garrett donated his services and the actual lights for the project. Reading Municipal Light Department donated the wire needed for the hookup. Electrical supplies were donated by Wright Electric Company.

The project, which also involved many local residents, required working on Saturdays and Sundays over a seven week period.

Lights at Glen Road field will enable Pop Warner football, Little League and girls' softball to have evening games and practices. There are numerous other recreational opportunities at Glen Road field that will become available as a result of these lights.

Those involved in this project have exemplified a high level of community spirit and a commitment to making Wilmington a better place to live and recreate. Your efforts are greatly appreciated.

Very truly yours,
Robert J. Cain, chairman
Wilmington Board of Selectmen

Don't blame Hallisey for John Chmura's decision

by Bill Conlon

The atmosphere of political infighting and name-calling has gotten out of hand in Tewksbury over the town manager issue, and its well past time to set a few things aright.

Tewkbury Selectman Paul Sullivan, with the aid of the Lowell Sun, has been trying to make political hay out of John Chmura's decision not to accept the Tewksbury town manager position. What really happened in Maine is much simpler than most people realize.

Sullivan (with the Sun's help) made accusations that Chairman of the Board of Selectmen Bill Hallisey failed to get in touch with Chmura in a timely fashion, causing Chmura to back out. That's flat wrong. Another assertion is that both Hallisey and Selectman John "Jay" Kelley have been trying to obstruct the town manager process all along. That too is wrong.

I stayed on the phone until 9 p.m. on the night before Thanksgiving and called four different states, three newspapers, one television station, and talked with John Chmura and his wife. I'm here to state plainly that the Chmuras declined the Tewksbury position simply because they didn't want to leave Waterville, Maine. Chmura said he understood the pay and benefits, and had no confusion at all, but after a long and serious discussion, the Chmuras just decided to stay where they are. Period.

One plausible explanation for staying in Maine might be found in Chmura's real estate situation. How would you feel about trying to sell a house in central Maine, during the Christmas season, only to move into a real estate market where the value of your home would only provide a fair down payment? It wouldn't be any fun.

If the Chmuras understood the level of infighting and petty political bickering in Tewksbury, then perhaps nobody would blame them for wishing to stay in the quiet fastness of Maine. The Chmuras instead agreed that things look bright for them in Waterville, with a supportive City Council and a new mayor taking office when the new year begins, along with friends and the usual ties to the area. Mrs. Chmura, in fact, called Maine a "neat state."

As for claims made by Sullivan of "obstructionism" caused by Hallisey and Kelley, the evidence just isn't there. Hallisey once told me he had (emphasis on the past tense) supported the idea of an elected town manager, but admitted that since the issue has been decided by the voters, he's changed his position and is now in favor of the town manager position, however the job may be filled.

Anyone who attends or watches the Tuesday night Board of Selectmen meetings will note that Sullivan has been going after both Hallisey and Kelley for some time now, and the Chmura incident is just so much political fodder.

Chmura said both Hallisey and Kelley called him repeatedly, between the time the board appointed him to the position and his last-minute decision not to accept. Mr. and Mrs. Chmura agreed that Hallisey and Kelley were businesslike and friendly on the phone, and that they made frequent contact. If the two were trying to obstruct the town manager process, they would have never called at all, let alone frequently.

As for Hallisey being called away on a "medical emergency," and thus being unable to get in touch with Chmura, there was no confusion there either. Chairman Hallisey said he had to rush his father–in-law, who is 94, to the hospital by ambulance on Thursday, and that the elderly gentleman almost died. Chmura said that he understood Hallisey's situation completely, sympathized with him, and said he didn't mind the delay one bit.

Chmura told me flat out that his inability to meet with Hallisey had no bearing whatsoever on his decision, and said the issue is being made into a political football in Tewksbury. He's right.

Selectmen Hallisey and Kelley are simply not to blame for Chmura's decision to stay in Maine. There was no neglect, no complaints by Chmura over the town manager's pay level, and no bitterness over delays in not meeting with Hallisey sooner.

Instead, the Lowell Sun appears to be taking sides in Tewksbury's unfortunate level of political gamesmanship, and that is not a proper role for a newspaper. Selectman Sullivan, who seems to have friends at the Sun -- judging by the coverage he's been given to the exclusion of Hallisey -- should apologize to his colleagues on the board for trying to make a political mountain out of this ridiculous molehill. The Sun should offer some apologies as well.

Hopefully David Cressman, who was given the town manager job after Chmura's withdrawal, will realize that he has walked into a political artillery range, and will disregard the inherent dangers of holding office in Tewksbury. With luck Mr. Cressman will come out swinging when he arrives to begin his duties. There can be little question that a strong, impartial and -- most importantly -- apolitical hand is needed to set Tewksbury back on track for the future. Tewksbury voters realize that the town is rife with political infighting, and most are trusting that the town manager will be able to rise above the infighting and clear the air, once and for all.

And the voters should never, ever be denied their wishes.

Smart woman at home

When I walked in on my psychologist friend Addler he was stretched out on his couch and crying like a baby -- between primal screams.

"Filter plugged on your pool again? I asked quietly.

He continued to look at the ceiling as the half-choked words came tumbling out. "Communists -- taking over everything -- now have firm foothold on Reader's Digest -- no hope left for the country."

I gingerly took the crumpled magazine from his hand and read the caption beneath a woman with two small children, "What's a Smart Woman Like You Doing at Home?"

"This looks bad," I gasped as I quickly sat down.

"It could destroy the country we know and love today," my friend observed. "This smart woman, Linda Burton, is an excellent writer. Loved her work and all that, so when she had kids she tried to find someone who could take care of them days."

"Easy enough to find.'

"Yes, but she wanted her kids to learn confidence and trust. She wanted their questions to be answered by an intelligent someone who really cared for them. Unfortunately, at one place she found the day-care woman asleep on the couch while 11 small children wandered around in front of TV."

"That wasn't right," I cried. "It's not fair to spy on the person taking care of your kids."

Addler sat up and almost screamed. "This Linda Burton woman says that the raising of children entails more than leaving them with a custodian."

"Talk like that could pull this country down."

He fell back on the couch and very slowly said, "She wanted a person who was alert, humorous, and gentle -- someone who could encourage the children's creativity and answer their questions in a loving manner."

I closed my eyes and whispered, "I know. The person she needed at home was herself."

It was several minutes before Addler could control himself enough to speak. He finaliy said, "It's been at least two years since the commies reported in Pravda that equality of the sexes and the working woman were shredding the fabric of Russian society. Two years ago then new party line encouraged men to get their hands out of the dishpan -- let women do women's work, let men do men's work."

Without raising my eyes I said, "It was only a matter of time before that poison spread here."

"Imagine coming home from school to find a waiting mother who loves you," Addler wailed.

"To begin with, you've eliminated the need for a school psychologist -- thousands of jobs will be lost. There'll be milk and cookies but no TV until your homework is done. Kids will be encouraged to read and think."

"Eliminate disturbed, unhappy children from a classroom and you can kiss some teacher's aides goodbye." I added.

"Vandalism would drop. Paint and glass companies would take a financial beating. There would be no little criminals growing up to be big criminals. Did you know," he condinuted, "that we're planning to build a thousand state and country prisons by the year 2000 at a cost of $200,000 a cell?"

"A mother who loved her kids enough to stay home and take care of them could hit our building contractor friends where it hurts," I agreed.

"To say nothing of whole cadres of social workers, and guards who would be without jobs. Actually, every social agency in the country would take a licking if enough mothers decided to be mothers. The word "angst" would disappear from the yuppie vocabulary."

"This could be the beginning of the end."

Addler nodded grimly. "A handful of smart women in their homes would destroy the country we love today."

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

In response to your editorial of November 18, 1987, the Reading Light Board respectfully disagrees with your support of the Wilmington Selectmen's current negotiating position.

While everyone acknowledges past difficulties between the Wilmington Selectmen and our board, Reading Light has attempted to demonstrate a genuine desire to settle all issues both fairly and expeditiously. Toward this end, we have submitted a series of letters detailing specific aeras of discussion to the selectmen dating back to June of this year.

In addition, Reading Light has invited all the Wilmington Selectmen to appear before our board at any time, has offered to appear at their pleasure before their board, has offered to send a negotiating team to Wilmington and even has purchased a newspaper advertisement asking the Wilmington Selectmen to begin serious discussions aimed at resolving legitimate differences.

We believe all these acts show good faith and will eventually spare our ratepayers and Wilmington taxpayers unnecessary legal and consulting fees.

As regards Selectman McCoy, Reading Light believes he acted with both foresight and courage in offering the Reading Light Department the opportunity to articulate our position. At no time did Selectman McCoy purport to represent either the entire board or even a to negotiate with us. He merely sought information, which we were eager to provide. After hearing our case, Selectman McCoy invited us to appear before the entire Wilmington Board.

It is our hope that whether the selectmen ultimately agree with our position or not, they will also grant the same opportunity afforded us by Selectman McCoy to publicly state our case and respond to any remaining questions and concerns.

Sincerely,
Allan E. Ames, Chairman,
Reading Municipal Light Board

Veterans visit Abundant Life School

by Arlene Surprenant

Students at the Abundant Life School in Wilmington recently learned that Veteran's Day is more than a day off from school.

At the invitation of school officials, Helen Moore of the American Legion and Marine veterans Charles Gilbert and Jim Hanlon paid a visit to the school.

According to Mrs. Moore, who served as an aircraft mechanic during World War II, all three spoke at an all-school assembly. They explained why they were willing to sacrifice so much for their country. They also spoke on the U.S. Constitution and its freedoms, the attack on Pearl Harbor, and how privileged they were to live in America.

"This country is beautiful; sometimes we just don't appreciate it," said Mrs. Moore, who added that often citizens take their freedoms and the country's beauty for granted. She pointed out that during the program, she came to realize that some youngsters had no idea of the role veterans played in this country's history.

After the assembly, Mrs. Moore addressed Mrs. Reed's third grade class and answered numerous questions fired at her by eager students. She and the students, she said, also prayed for those veterans still in hospitals or who are still "living the war."

Mrs. Moore said she was delighted by the enthusiatic reception she and the other veterans received by the students.

"I was as impressed with them as they seemed to be with us," she said. Mrs. Moore was even more impressed when a manila envelope full of thank-you notes and drawings from the students was delivered to her home a few days later.

by Mark

Dear Veteran,
I thank God for my country! It is the land of the free and the brave. I love America.
-- Darryl

Dear Veteran,
I'm glad you came to talk about the country. Now I know what Veteran's Day is all about. I didn't know that America was the best country.
-- Joel

Dear Veteran,
I am proud to live in America. And thank you for fighting so that we could have freedom (and) America the Beautiful.
-- Jonathan

Dear Veteran,
Thank you for talking about our country. It was nice of you to be in our school.
-- Mark James

History students study roots

Advanced Placement American History students at Wilmington High recently completed family and local history projects designed to make the study of history more relevant to young people. In an attempt to bring history closer to home, students were asked to complete historical studies of either some aspect of local history or their own family history.

Many of the students chose to complete family history projects, which included a family tree or chart, and a written biographical sketch of the family. Students were also expected to personalize their history projects by including a family album of pictures, a map designating family roots, or a case study of a particular member of their family.

By studying their own family histories, it was hoped that students would achieve a better understanding of major historical events as well as relate to more recent historical periods.

The results surprised teacher Linda Hayes as well as the students themselves. They attacked the project with an enthusiasm and interest not often found in history classes, and the finished products created a tremendous amount of excitement among the young historians.

Several of the students prepared picture albums which included photographs taken during the 19th century. Others described the adversities that their families faced living in other countries and their subsequent immigration to the United States. Some students were surprised to find famous relatives in their family's past.

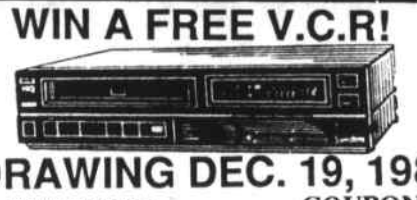

Students who elected to complete a local history project were responsible for preparing a research report on some aspect of Wilmington's history. Several of these projects took a "then and now" approach, comparing the town today to Wilmington 50 or 100 years ago.

Students preparing these reports did much of their research in the Wilmington Memorial Library. One student was fascinated with the local history display at the library, and his remark to Mrs. Hayes that "I never thought Wilmington looked like that" seemed to sum up the attitude of most students.

There is presently a display at the high school showcasing some of the research and photographs which were part of the projects. The public is invited to come view the display.

Season tickets on sale

The Wilmington High School Athletic Department is making available special season passes for all home events this winter at a special reduced rate. Those wishing to purchase these tickets should go to the athletic office any school day.

For this season, ice hockey has a total of 11 home events and two games in the Elks Festival in Woburn. The per game ticket is as follows: adults, $3 x 13 events, $39; season passes, $20; students, $2 x 13 events, $26; season passes, $10.

Another interesting package is for all of the events scheduled in the Cushing Gymnasium which includes 12 boys' basketball, 10 girls' basketball, 10 wrestling and six gymnastics events for only $15, students $10.

The per game ticket price for any of the events in the gym is $2 for adults and $1 for students. The savings for adults and students would be varied depending upon the sport of interest.

Girl scouting offers great opportunities for adults

Local Girl Scouts need adults to lead troops and participate in some interesting activities.

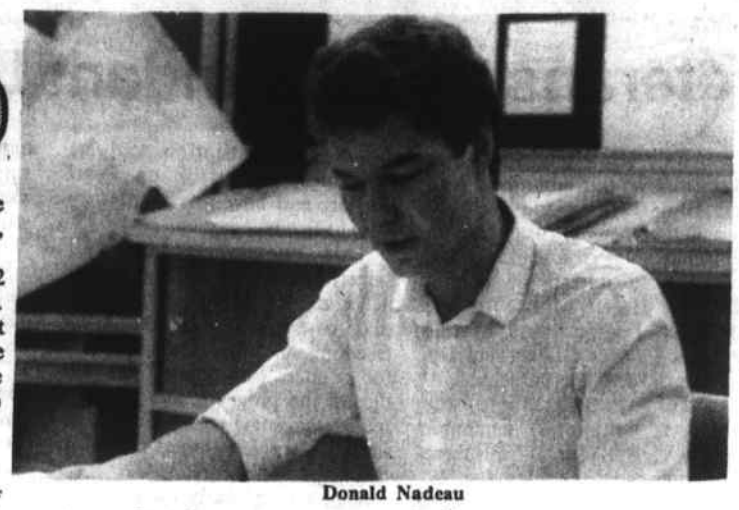

Girl Scouting is a volunteer organization and adult leadership is vital to its existence. The variety and opportunity adults are exposed to make volunteering a very rewarding experience. Being a troop leader is the most common position known in Girl Scouting.

Troop leaders usually meet once a week after school, early evenings, or on the weekend with their troop. The key to the whole philosophy of Girl Scouting is the unique girl/adult partnership. Together plans are made and goals are set for the year.

Troops today camp-in at the Museum of Science, go on whale watches, and visit corporations to learn about career opportunities.

Troop leaders can travel to the Girl Scout Conference Center in New York for specialized training or travel to Wyoming through Girl Scout's Wider Opportunities program.

There are many other positions available to adults in Girl Scouting aside from leading a troop. Adults may help out during the cookie sale, serve on the Public Relations Committee, or help out at summer camp. If you are interested and willing, there is a place for you in Girl Scouting. Please call the Girl Scout Council office to receive information about Girl Scouting in your area. Days 689-8015 and evenings 922-7061.

Donald Nadeau

Intern working on town land inventory

The Town of Wilmington is making a survey of town owned property that may be used for affordable housing. The idea, presumably, is to have the information ready for a town meeting, either special or the annual meeting next spring.

Donald Nadeau, 25-year-old senior at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst is the person who is doing the survey. He is spending some months as an "intern" at the Wilmington Town Hall. Donald works out of the planning board office, and pores over town maps, to find land that is owned by the town.

He has been in the town hall since last June, on a six months internship. If the town manager likes the work that he is doing, on or about January first he will have his intern studies extended until next summer.

Donald is studying for a degree in environmental science, a study of a type which did not exist about 30 years ago. It is, he says, interesting.

A native of Maine, he makes his home at this time in Medford. If he completes the study it may be that the planning board study for which the town meeting voted, about six years ago, will also be completed.

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINE

By Sharon Kelley, G.R.I.
Kelley & Kompany

Pricing Your Home

Setting a fair price is a crucial first step in putting your home on the market, and it begins with a professional market analysis of the property. You might start by looking around the neighborhood at other houses or condominiums for sale. Then contact a Realtor familiar with your area to get information about asking price of these homes and the length of time each one has been on the market. Your realtor will know the features of each property that might have affected its value, such as the number of rooms, the overall condition, and the extras -- family rooms, finished storage areas, garages or carports, or wall-to-wall carpeting. By putting all of this information together, you can establish a market value for your home, or a price range in which it is likely to sell. If it's priced within about 5% of the established market value, your home should sell fairly quickly.

If you are considering a move, contact the professionals at Kelley & Kompany. Call us at 658-4171 or stop by our office at 11 Middlesex Avenue (Suite #10) in Wilmington.

Wilmington school news

Wilmington High School

Theater Arts teacher Lynda St. James and Wilmington High seniors Heather Cram, Karen Snyder, and Jennifer Campbell attended the New England Theatre Conference Annual Convention held in New Haven, Connecticut at the Park Plaza Hotel. The convention took place Nov.6-8. The convention is said to be the largest event for all professional and educational theater people in New England.

This year, in addition to the workshops, high schoolers interested in pursuing theater in college had a chance to audition for admittance and scholarships to 19 different colleges. Students were chosen for these auditions based on academic standing and actual experience in the theater.

Both Heather Cram and Jen Campbell were honored to audition and each was approached by several of the attending colleges. Heather is currently waiting to hear about a full scholarship from Salem State and Jen was offered a $1,000 scholarship and guaranteed admission from the University of Miami.

December 18-Annual Christmas Concert

Wildwood School

Teacher Peggy Marrano and her class got into the spirit of Thanksgiving by donning Pilgrim and Indian costumes and celebrating with a Thanksgiving feast.

The November PAC meeting was well attended. Many ideas and suggestions resulted. The PAC, in conjunction with school administrators, has decided to set aside a two week period in December to receive donations which will be turned over to needy families. It is hoped that the children will experience the joy of giving that represents the Christmas season.

PAC members were delighted to hear Principal Michael Tikonoff report that the result of three weeks of silent reading is 350 PAWS on the school walls. The children look forward to the silent reading and the staff is thrilled with the program's success.

At the suggestion of those present, it was decided the January PAC meeting will be in the morning. Maureen McDonald will notify parents of upcoming meetings through her "Spirit" bulletin. On behalf of the executive board, Maureen wishes to express our pleasure at the number of new faces at the meeting. We look forward to seeing even more of you next time.

Upcoming: Please note that this year's Christmas Concert will be held December 16.

Also, members of the Student Council are busy working on posters which will adorn the hallways of the school.

NOTE: If you would like to share news of your school and PAC, please bring it to the Town Crier office by Monday afternoons or call Arlene Surprenant at 658-5696.

Electricians' course at Shawsheen Tech

Shawsheen Tech has been approved to offer a 15-hour mandatory code education course for licensed electricians. A state mandated offering, the seminar will cover the 1987 code changes, calculations and the Massachusetts Code Amendments. To enroll, electricians should plan to go to the January, 11-14, 7 to 9 p.m. registration for the Shawsheen Adult Evening School.

Two electrical program instructors at Shawsheen, Jack Landers and Richard Leonard, will each the course, which will be offered from 6 to 9 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays for two and a half weeks. Four sections, listed as A, B, C and D in the evening school brochure, will give students a choice of dates to attend. Classes are limited to 25 students. At the close of the course, attendees will receive a certificate of completion and a sticker for their electrician's license. Both Landers and Leonard are licensed electricians and certified electrical instructors.

All licensed electricians must take the state mandated course between now and the next licensing renewal, and then every two years, according to Ray Elden, evening school coordinator.

Elden noted that there are 37,000 licensed electricians in Massachusetts who must fulfill this state requirement before their next license renewal time. He said Shawsheen Tech is offering one of the most conveniently scheduled programs at a reasonable cost. Course fee is $80.

Shawsheen Evening School registration takes place from January 11-14 from 7 to 10 p.m. in the school cafeteria. Elden said the mandatory code course would be in addition, not in place of other evening school electrical courses. Basic electrical and electrical code will continue to be offered.

Paul DeFronzo — Angela Lin

WHS students of the month

Paul DeFronzo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pat DeFronzo of 5 Allen Park Drive and Angela Lin, daughter of Chi-Wei and Julie C. Lin of 3 Wilton Drive, have been selected students of the month at Wilmington High School.

Paul DeFronzo

Paul is currently ranked ninth in his class. He is active in many activities including cross country, winter track (co-captain), spring track, National Honor Society (press agent and director of public relations), Distributive Education Club of America (treasurer), Math Honor Society, and the yearbook staff.

Paul is applying to Dartmouth College, Villanova University, Boston College, College of Holy Cross, and Bentley College.

Angela Lin

Angela is a semifinalist in the National Merit Scholarship Competition and a member of the National and Math Honor Societies. She has received several academic honor awards as well as the Wilmington Wildcat Award in Sculpture. She is a member of the Drama Club, the yearbook staff and Boston's Community Sailing Club. She plays the guitar and enjoys reading and art.

She is an emplaoyee of Lord & Taylor Department Store in Burlington. She is undecided as to a college major but is applying to Harvard, Princeton and Wesleyan College.

Class of '87 findings released

Wilmington High School has announced the findings of a recent survey conducted by the guidance department of the 1987 graduating class. Nearly 70 percent of the Class of 1987 is enrolled in either a two or a four year college program at over 90 different colleges across the United States.

The majority of the students are enrolled in such outstanding Massachusetts institutions as Harvard, Radcliffe, Boston College, Boston University, Holy Cross, Tufts, Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Babson, and the prestigious Museum School of Fine Arts while the fine Massachusetts State College system has our graduates enrolled at the Amherst campus as well as many other campuses across the state.

Many other graduates have taken their academic skills to various universities across the country. Michigan State, Lafayette, Purdue, Syracuse, Providence College, Villanova, Clemson, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, University of New Hampshire, and University of Vermont are just a few of the outstanding academic institutions that can claim a 1987 Wilmington High School grad as a member of their freshmen class.

In addition to Harvard and Radcliffe, other Ivy League schools also saw members of the 1987 class take their places on their September rolls. Continuing a recent tradition, Princeton led the way among the Ivies with WHS graduates.

The percentage of college-bound graduates of Wilmington High School continues to grow and first predictions for the class of 1988 may very well see almost two-thirds of the class attend a two or a four year college.

Susan Killilea nominated for DAR award

Wilmington High School has announced that it has nominated senior Susan Killilea for the prestigious Daughters of the American Revolution Good Citizen Award. This national competition awards a $1,000 college scholarship to that high school student who has demonstrated strong leadership qualities both in school and in the community.

Susan is currently ranked fifth in her class while enrolled in the very demanding advanced placement/ honors program at the high school. She is a member of the championship field hockey team and tennis team as well as being actively involved with the National Honor Society, Peer Tutoring Program, and Student Council.

Airport manager

Tew-Mac airport manager Warren Hupper spoke to the Tewksbury Lions Club recently, and told of the present and future of private aviation. Like most airports of similar size, Tew-Mac has a 99.9 percent safety record, Hupper told the Lions, with about 100,000 flights made annually.

Tewksbury airport has over 100,000 flights a year

The Tew Mac Airport in Tewksbury is one of two in Middlesex County for non-military planes, according to Warren Hupper, the operator. Hupper addressed the Tewksbury Lions Club last week.

The airport has an operation of 100,000 flights a year, in, primarily smaller civilian aircraft. It is not a primary airport, but it is one of the safer secondary airports.

There are approximately 16,000 airports in the United States. Of these 6,000 such as Tewksbury, are open for general use. Six hundred are to be classified as Carrier Airports, to be used by the big passenger carriers.

In Massachusetts there are 52 airports open to the public. Twenty-six of those are privately owned.

The Tewksbury Airport is one that is growing in use. Not too long ago there were only a few business flights a week. Now there are 25 in a day. A lot of that traffic comes from private individuals who use the airport as a stopping place, to get home, in Tewksbury or in near communities.

Airports which are Carrier Airports, such as Logan Field in East Boston, have less than 4,400 flights a day. In the next 10 years they can be expected to grow to about 5,400.

The general average for all airports like Tewksbury totals to about 54,000,000 flights a year. The bigger passenger companies total about 5,000,000. All told this is an important national asset, and it operates with a 99.9 percent safety record.

But the country is losing its airports. The housing pressure is one cause. The nation will soon be facing a serious airport shortage.

There are about 100 aircraft based in Tewksbury. All are privately owned.

Tewksbury's safety record is the result of care in operations. It does not have a radar landing system, but airplanes can be "talked down" safely. Planes flying above the Tewksbury Airport are "viable" to the radar at Logan Airport until they get down to a level of about 600 feet. From that level they can often be landed visually.

Yes, it is possible for a private person to get a license to fly airplanes at the Tewksbury Airport. For a private person it takes two to three years, and that person will probably spend from $3,000 to $3,500 in getting that license.

coming events

Christmas social at Harnden Tavern

The Friends of Harnden Tavern, Wilmington will present their annual Christmas social Sunday afternoon, Dec. 6 from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Tavern located at 430 Salem St., Route 62, North Wilmington.

There will be baked goods and hand crafted items for sale. Well known Wilmington bard Warren Newhouse will lead the folk singing and caroling.

Upstairs there will be a Christmas tree for the children to help decorate. A raffle will be held for two sets of handmade afghans with pillows to match. Hot mulled cider will be served with cheddar cheese and crackers.

Donation is $2; children $1; family admission, $5. The public is invited to take part and get in the spirit of the Christmas social.

Christmas get-together

Plans are underway for a Christmas get-together and luncheon buffet at AIM Headquarters December 15 from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wilmington residents are invited to come and share some good food, fellowship, and a holiday carol sing.

AIM Headquarters is located in the Fourth of July building across from town common. It has been opened each Tuesday since early October for the benefit of handicapped citizens and their friends.

According to Judy DiPalma, who was responsible for initiating the Tuesday socials, the center has brought together not only the disabled but several senior citizens and others who now look forward to the weekly gatherings. The general consensus, she said, is that the center offers a chance to share problems and new interests, allay loneliness, and meet new friends.

Celtic celebration of Christmas in Lowell

Sounds of the Season, an annual series sponsored by the Lowell Historic Preservation Commission (LHPC) and presented free to the general public, will open Sunday, Dec. 6 with a special Celtic celebration of Christmas - past and present - featuring the popular Maine-based group "Castlebay."

Covring a wide spectrum of additional music and style, the performance will include both sacred and secular offerings ranging from 16th Century processionals and motets to folk arrangements of both familiar and obscure carols.

Castlebay members, Julia Lane, Fred Gosbee, Brian Chadbourne and Mark McNeil, hae become familiar and very popular entertainers on the greater-Lowell musical scene having performed numerous times over the last two years in the Summer Courtyard Concert sries and at special openings at A Brush With History and other art exhibits and craft shows. They are well known for their unusual harmonies and innovative treatment of traditional folk music, especially that of the british Isles. Four part acapella pieces will be interspersed with arrangements using not only six and 12 string guitars, but Celtic harp, autoharp, bowed psaltry, flutes, pennywhistle and various percussion instruments. Lore associated with the songs will also be presented.

This LPHC sponsored concert is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. at the National and State Park visitor center theatre at Market Mills, 246 Market St., in downtown Lowell, and is handicapped accessible.

Other groups to be featured in the Sounds of the Season series include The Westford Chorus and the Bolivian folk singers, Fortaleza, who will present Christmas music as heard in the Andeas.

For more information call LPHC Events Coordinator, Ruth Meehan (617) 458-7653 or the National Park (617) 459-1000.

Christmas lighting ceremonies at Merrimack

Merrimack College has invited its neighbors, friends and alumni from the Merrimack Valley to be the college's guests again this year for the lighting of the Merrimack College Christmas tree.

For the seventh consecutive year, the Rev. John E. Deegan, O.S.A., president of Merrimack College, and the entire college community will host the tree lighting ceremony Sunday, Dec. 6, beginning at 4:30 p.m. Again this year, the program is made possible through a grant from Bay Bank Merrimack Valley.

The festivities will begin at 4:30 p.m. with music, reading and the lighting of the college's Christmas tree outside the Collegiate Church of Christ the Teacher. A selection of Christmas music will be performed by the Merrimack College Chorale, under the direction of Dr. Joseph Kelley. old St. Nick himself is also expected to make an appearance during the tree lighting ceremony.

Following the tree lighting, refreshments will be served in the church auditorium. The College Chorale will also perform a selection of Christmas music during the reception.

"This annual tree lighting and concert is Merrimack's Christmas gift to its neighbors and friends in the region," Father Deegan said. "We especially hope that families with their children will come to Merrimack for a joy-filled, entertaining evening to begin the Christmas season in new England."

The tree lighting program is being coordinated by the Student Activities Center and the Merrimack College Class of 1991.

• Carnival

Committee visited booths in the carnival and asked the concessionaires to remove items from display which could be constituted as sexually suggestive.

Carnival owner Larry Cushing Jr. objected to the committee approaching the concessionaires directly, rather than going through him. He defended the graphics as being the same materials used as prizes by the carnival in other locations.

A subcommittee of the Fourth of July Committee was instructed to come up with a contract for the carnival. That contract was not settled, and the issue was postponed twice by the committee.

It came up for a vote on November 17. The subcommittee chairman was away on a vacation, and there was no concrete proposal put before the committee. A motion to allow the carnival lost, four to seven. Chairman Jack Cushing abstained, being the brother of the carnival owner.

Some members of the committee are hopeful that the issue can be smoothed over. Others are adamant that the vote be considered final.

Larry Cushing has written the following letter on the matter.

Dear Larz:

Approximately six weeks ago I received a call from Mr. Fudge of the Fourth of July Committee requesting a contract for the year 1988. This was unusual since 95 percent of our contracts are handshakes. However, I did in fact draw one up.

Then, the day before Thanksgiving, I received the following letter from the Fourth of July Committee saying there would be no carnival in 1988, and thanking me on behalf of the people of Wilmington.

This surprised me because this was decided November 17, 1987 and I called a few people and everyone thought I was kidding.

I don't know what the real issue is because the 1987 event was one of the best. I thought the carnival was a very intricate part of the celebration.

I may be biased in my opinion, but everyone I talk to seems to want the carnival.

We believe that without the carnival many age groups will be left out of the celebration unless the committee is going to do something else. I'm sure that they would not have made this move unless they had something else in mind.

I also believe this will have an effect on other charitable organizations who earn money on the Fourth.

I wish the people of Wilmington would let the Fourth of July Committee know what they really want.

I will not seek alternate arrangements for the Fourth of July week until the last possible moment.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
Larry Cushing

Dear Larry and Marion

Please be advised that the Wilmington Fourth of July Committee, at its November 17, 1987 meeting, voted to eliminate all carnival activities from its 1988 Fourth of July celebration.

On behalf of the people of the Town of Wilmington, we thank you for your past services, and we wish you the best of luck in securing alternative arrangements for the Fourth of July week.

Very truly ours,
Wilmington Fourth of July Committee

Win won

What started as a charitable gesture ended up as a win for Win. Win Polsey (right) of the Wilmington Kiwanis Club bought several tickets on a raffle the club was holding for a computer. Win is a generous sort of guy. On Monday night, the drawing was held, and . . . Win won. The proceeds from the raffle go the Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Institute in Boston, a unit at Tufts New England Medical Center which gives specialized care to badly injured children. The computer was donated for the raffle by Bill Meegan (left) of the Computer Bargain Center.

Wilmington senior topics

Council meets Monday

The December Council on Aging meeting will be held in the function room at the Buzzell Senior Citizen Center Monday, Dec. 7, starting at 1:30 p.m. Issues important to the elderly of the town will be discussed and voted on. Those who disapprove of a vote taken should attend the meetings.

Fuel assistance

Applications for fuel assistance are still being processed at the center, by appointment. Those planning to apply in December should remember that a copy of income checks - Social Security, pension, or work checks. The application can not be processed without them. Those who are shut in are urged to call the Center 657-7595 for an appointment for a house call.

December social

This is the last week to sign up for the December therapeutic social which will be held at the Tewksbury/Wilmington Elks Hall. Those who have not signed up by the end of this week will be placed on a waiting list.

Letters to Washington DC

Many seniors have taken the letters at the Center and mailed them to political representatives in Washington. Those who care how they will survive when the elderly programs are slashed from the budget had better act now. Could you live on a smaller Social Security check? Can you afford to pay a major part of your medical care? If the answer is no, then it is time to fight now before the final cuts are made in the upcoming budget. The letters will let your voice be heard.

Arts and crafts

The arts and crafts committee thanks all the seniors who worked to make last weekend's fair a success. Those who made all the beautiful articles, those who served and prepared the spaghetti dinner, the women who spent endless hours pricing the large number of articles and working the tables both days, but most importantly, they thank all who attended the fair.

Thanks for dinner

We thank those seniors who welcomed several of their peers into their homes on Thanksgiving Day. For a senior to sit down to a dinner alone on Thanksgiving is sad, but by asking a lonely senior to join them at dinner was wonderful. We also thank the Congregational and United Methodist churches who welcomed other seniors at their Thanksgiving meal. Several donated turkeys were delivered to seniors unable to buy one due to expensive medical bills.

Activity programs

For those who indulged a little too much, celebrating Thanksgiving, it would be a good idea to join the exercise classes at the Center to trim a few of those unwanted pounds, before the Christmas celebration. You may select one or all of the exercise programs. The therapeutic exercise classes, Monday and Wednesday mornings from 10 to 11. The walking program on Mondays starting at 9 a.m. leaving the center. Dancing on Thursday afternoons begins at 1 p.m. and bowling at the Candlepin Lanes in North Reading starts at 1 p.m. Wednesday.

US Postal Service

We have been informed that the United States Postal Service provides for home-bound seniors in regard to stamps. The home bound senior should call the post office and ask for an order form. Fill it out and return it with your check made out to Postmaster. When you order the form you will also receive a postage free envelope. Normally your order will be returned to you in three days and you will receive another order form.

Fair season

This is the season of Christmas fairs. Last Saturday, the Wilmington senior citizens held a fair at the drop-in center on School Street. Good Guy Lillian Brown and Cecily Spiris were photographed at a table of mittens. (Photo by Dave Fitzgerald)

Wreath making

Putting up the giant Christmas wreath at the Wilmington Congrgational Church is a family affair, done each year by the Bertwells and the Bucks. While Barbara Buck and her father, Sara Bertwell work on the front of the wreath, Barbara's son Jim, whose arm is visible, feeds a wire from below.

Father and son

The wreath-making at the Congregational Church is a four-generation task. Scott Buck and his father Jim put their heads together on the job.

Tech school committee begins budget planning

by Arlene Surprenant

Members of the Shawsheen Tech School Committee have started planning next year's school budget. According to member Kevin Sowyrda, though, alot depends on the passage of Senate Bill #1826.

The bill would increase state aid to regional vocational schools in Massachusetts, which would go a long way toward lowering assessments member towns pay to help support the schools. If the bill passes, for instance, Shawsheen Tech would be eligible for up to $800,000 in state funds, some of which would go to capital expenditures, said Sowyrda.

The bill is expected to come up for a vote in the Senate Ways and Means Committee Wednesday.

Sowyrda said Supterintendent-Director Charles Lyons has been working on the bill's passage for the past two years. He explained he and fellow committeeman John Gillis have spent numerous hours on Beacon Hill trying to gain legislative support for the document. Area legislators Sen. Robert Buell, Rep. James Miceli, and Rep. Geoffrey Beckwith have pledged their support and "worked hard for us" to see that the bill is passed before the end of the year, Sowyrda added.

If the bill fails, proponents plan to reintroduce it next year, though that means the process has to be started all over again.

Sowyrda pointed to the negative impact declining state aid has had on all 27 vocational school districts. While local spending percentages have increased from FY 82 to FY88 in the five member communities of the Shawsheen Tech, he said, the Tech budget has been kept in check over the past five years. However, assessments have had to increase "just to keep our heads above water," Sowyrda added.

Budget talks will continue each week under treasurer John Gillis until a budget is finalized sometime around February. The committee, said Sowyrda, is committed to meeting with town officials as early as possible to come up with "a reasonable, justifiable budget."

Sowyrda praised Lyons for his part in budget preparations. He said Lyons is "gifted" in the budget process and has done alot to "build confidence in his administration."

David M. Kelleher

Airman David M. Kelleher, son of Joseph and Zella Kelleher of Pupkis Road, Tewksbury, has graduated from the U.S. Air Force security police specialist course at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas.

He is a 1987 graduate of Tewksbury Memorial High

Harrington started school at old West School

Master Gunnery Sergeant Joseph D. Harrington of the United States Marine Corps (retired) has a distinctive history in that corps. He retired in 1986, after 25 years service and is now a resident of Jacksonville, North Carolina. Sometime after World War II he lived at 9 Amherst Rd., Wilmington and he began his education in the old West School on Shawsheen Avenue.

One of his fondest memories is of Lena Eames, Lena Shaw Eames, a lady who taught off and on in the Wilmington schools for over 40 years. Lena Shaw came down from Woolwich, Maine, about 1905 and began her Wilmington teaching career in the South School, on Chestnut Street.

While she taught in that school she met one of the young men in Wilmington, Alden Eames. He was a civil engineer. They married in 1908. They lived in the old Walker - Nichols house on Shawsheen House, a house dating back to about 1730.

Living next door to the West School, Lena began to teach there. Off and on for nearly 40 years Lena Eames taught in that school. Sometimes there were four grades, sometiems there were two. There were times when there were not enough pupils, too. The few who came from that part of town would attend the Walker School.

Lena was a girl who instilled knowledge, and proper manners too, in her poupils. She had a playground outside, with one side for girls and the other for boys. She could watch the children during the lunch hour from within, and a rap of her ring on the window pane kept the children in order.

In the early 1920s was a period in which the school was closed. For two years it was a local headquarters for the just started state police. Then it was shut down and became almost a wreck.

Boy Scouts from Troop I, Wilmington , was there for two years. Only about three persons in Wilmington today remember that troop, a Canadian veteran, Hubert E. Cann, was the scoutmaster, and he fixed up the old school and equipped it with electric lights.

About 1928 the school resumed, with Lena Eams again in charge. She taught, not steadily, for another 20 years.

In 1948 Joe Harrington became a pupil. Of course the first year was in the first grade. When he returned, it was for the second grade.

Joseph Harrington

Lena had him in the right row, first seat. A few days later Joe was moved to the next aisle. In a few weeks he was back in the first grade side. Lena gave him first grade studies to do.

Joe protested. He was supposed to do second grade studies. Lena smiled and said he would do first grade studies.

Every morning there was a morning prayer, a Pledge of Allegiance to the American flag, and a patriotic song.

On numerous occasions it was the Marine Humn - "From the Halls of Montezuma."

Joe says he made a mistake and asked Lena Eames what that song was. Lena told him, with more than a touch of pride in her voice.

That was why Joe joined the United States Marines.

HAMMER TOES
WHAT CAN BE DONE?
Hammer toes are small-toe deformities that occur in the little joints of the toe. Their cause can be attributed to inherited bone and joint structures and are aggrivated by shoe gear.
A hammer toe is usally a "claw-like" deformity of the first joint of the smaller toes. The joint "buckles" upwards and rubs in the shoes. The rubbing irritates the skin and the joint and causes a painful swollen joint along with a corn over the joint.
Correction of this deformity can be simple releasing of the tendons, to releasing of the tendons in combination with removal of a small piece of bone.
These procedures are done under local anesthesia on a out-patient basis in either the office or hospital.

Boudreau stars for Tewksbury

Redmen slosh past Wildcats, 6-0

by Rick Cooke
Sports Editor

For more than three quarters Thursday the Wilmington Wildcats and the Tewksbury Redmen sloshed and slogged their way to a 0-0 Thanksgiving morning standoff that was beginning to look like the perfect capper to a dismal season for both teams.

The Redmen had seen enough of this shutout routine this season however, and decided that a decent TMHS defense had been frustrated long enough.

Early in the fourth quarter junior quarterback Dave Boudreau found the man he had replaced five games ago with a two-yard touchdown toss for the game's only score.

It was fitting that senior running back Jay Rideout caught the winning TD pass in this Thanksgiving game.

Rideout, plagued by injuries and inconsistencies this season after quarterbacking Tewksbury to an 8-2 finish a year ago, redeemed himself with a solid effort at his relatively new position Thursday.

The win snapped a six game winless streak (0-5-1) for coach Bob Aylward's Redmen, while coach Ed Harrison's Wildcats finished at 1-8-1 after going winless (0-8-1) in their last nine games.

The Wildcats, winless a year ago, got their season off to a fine start with a win over Central Catholic, but their offense sputtered after scoring two touchdowns in the season opener.

The Redmen have now won three straight Thanksgiving contests and lead the 53-year-old series 28-19-7.

In other Thanksgiving contests around the league, Chelmsford ripped Billerica, 22-7 to finish 10-0 and qualify for the Division II Super Bowl December 5 against Gloucester; Lowell nipped Lawrence on a last second pass, 7-6; Dracut upset Methuen, 16-6; Central Catholic stunned Andover, 7-0 and Salem, N.H. topped Haverhill, 14-6 in a season ending non-league contest.

Boudreau takes charge

Boudreau was in command despite the horrible weather conditions that sent fans home in droves late in the second quarter.

Dave completed 14 of 20 passes for 175 yards in a performance that gives the Redmen a hopeful outlook going into next season.

Boudreau's performance took on more importance when you consider that neither team could move the football on the ground.

Tewksbury picked up just 29 yards on 41 carries, while the Wildcats were limited to minus seven yards on 19 carries.

Tewksbury's defense came through with the big play that set up the game's only score, as Keith Sullivan intercepted Wildcat quarterback Dave Woods at the TMHS' 36. The Redmen then moved the ball 64 yards in four plays for the touchdown.

The key play of the drive was a 46 completion to junior Chris Horgan, who finished the game with five catches good for 88 yards.

With the ball at the Wilmington 18 yard line, Rideout carried the ball twice down to the four before he latched onto a Boudreau pass and spun off a Wilmington defender and into the left corner of the endzone for the touchdown.

Wildcats can't move ball

The Wilmington offense was plagued by mistakes from that point on, as they failed to move the ball on five fourth quarter possessions.

The five times that the Wildcats had the ball they turned it right over to the Redmen defense via three interceptions and a pair of fumbles.

The Redmen let their tough defense do the talking late in the third quarter when Aylward gambled and went for the first down on a fourth and inches play at the TMHS' 26 yard line.

The Wildcats' defense was just as stingy on this day however, stuffing Boudreau on a quarterback sneak on that fourth down play.

The Wilmington offense could not take advantage of that briefly gained momentum however. The Wildcats could come up with just four yards on four plays in again surrendering the football back to the Redmen.

Another TMHS gamble

Tewksbury's Aylward maintained his gambling style that has burned his team several times this season, going for a fake field goal in the first quarter from the nine yard line.

Wildcat Dan Woods smothered kicker Sean Wilson on the play to keep the game scoreless late in that opening quarter.

The only other chance that the Redmen had to score was in that first period when a 32 yard punt return by John Miller was wiped out by a clipping infraction.

Teams look to future

The Redmen finish a hard-luck season at 2-6-1, while the Wildcats complete their season in last place in the MVC with a 1-8-1 slate.

Both teams went into this season with rosters dominated by underclassmen that will have to contribute next year if either club hopes to move up in the tough Merrimack Valley Conference.

Tewksbury will have a 9-0-0 freshmen team moving up for next season to combine with a junior varsity lineup that was led by juniors this past season.

Wilmington may have to wait until a developing Pop Warner program led by former WHS players can get untracked.

There is also hope that tiny Wilmington can become more competitive by an eventual move to the Cape Ann League. That could still happen in the near future.

The Wildcat seniors who held their heads high for the past two seasons in the face of some real adversity were Dan Woods, Bob Anderson, Dan Cadigan, Pat Nally, Derek LeBlanc, Don Sullivan, Sean Costello, Dave Feyler, Jeff Boutwell, Butch McGovern, Tim Fay, Dave Gidari and C.J. Barber.

The Redmen seniors who saw both good days and bad in their years with the team were Jay Rideout, John Cho, Sean Green, Scott Devivo, Jim Lincoln, Dave McSweeney, Jim Davis, Brian French, Scott Niles, Dan Britton, Chris Diamond and Jason Voto.

Super Bowl pairings

The schoolboy Super Bowl pairings for this coming weekend will feature some interesting matchups.

The Chelmsford Lions will be making their first Division II appearance since 1978 when they tangle with Gloucester (10-0-0) in the title game this Saturday (Dec. 5) at Sullivan Stadium starting at 9:45 a.m.

The other games pit Division I powers Brockton (10-0-0) against Middlesex League champion Woburn (10-0-0) at Sullivan Stadium at 1 p.m.; Canton (10-0-0) against Foxboro (8-1-0) at Sullivan Stadium at 4 p.m.; Whitman-Hanson (9-1-0) vs. Norwell (9-1-0) in the Division Four 11 a.m. game at Boston University; and Greater Lawrence Regional (10-0-0) against West Roxbury (9-0-0) in the Division Five battle at Boston University beginning at 2 p.m.

Any high school football fan should take in one of these games. The Gloucester-Chelmsford game shapes up as a real tong war.

Rideout rolls past Wildcats

Tewksbury High School senior running back Jay Rideout rolls around a diving Dan Woods (7) and faces the challenge presented by safety Tony DeLucia (10) early in Thursday morning's 6-0 victory over the Wilmington Wildcats. Rideout scored the game's only touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Fay Nichols' award winner

Scott Fay of Tewksbury recently received the Key Chain Award for football at the recent Nichols College fall sports banquet.

Fay, a sophomore majoring in management at Nichols, is a member of the Varsity Club. A graduate of Tewksbury Memorial High School, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Fay.

Super soccer

The TMHS soccer squad was led by a hustling defense and an exciting offense that led the team to another Small School title. This action took place in the tournament loss to Lynn English.

Another star season

Redmen senior Marc Paglia recently completed another all-star caliber season for the Tewksbury High School soccer team.

Heading ball upfield

Tewksbury's Tim Quinn heads the ball away from a defender in recent Eastern Mass. Soccer Tournament action.

TMHS cross country

TMHS girls crack all-star lineup

Tewksbury High School has fielded a girls' cross country team for 10 years. During that time there have been some excellent runners competing for TMHS and several teams with winning records.

This season the team finally achieved an elusive goal. The girls not only had a very impressive dual meet record (seven wins, two losses), they also won the Bedford Invitational and pulled off a surprising fifth place at the Division II State Meet. That fifth place won them the right never achieved by a TMHS team before, to go to the All-State championship meet.

This year's All-State meet was held in Northfield, Mass., a town near the Vermont border. The morning of the race the temperature was 10 degrees and the wind was howling across the hilly course. It would be hard to imagine conditions any worse for running a cross country race.

When the gun sounded, 220 of the best runners in the state took off across the wind-swept field and headed up the first of the several steep hills.

Most of the course was over cross country ski trails and many of the runners probably wished they were on skis. The course was so tough that several runners had to drop out.

Not all of the Tewksbury runners had their best days, but all could be satisfied that they had done their best and had held their own against the very best competition and the toughest course.

Jennifer Harmon ran a very good race, averaging 7:03 per mile and finishing in 88th place. All season long Jennifer turned in consistently good performances, and this race was no exception.

Chrissy Juskiewicz has also been a steady, ever-improving runner, and she did very well in this race, averaging 7:17 per mile and finishing 135th.

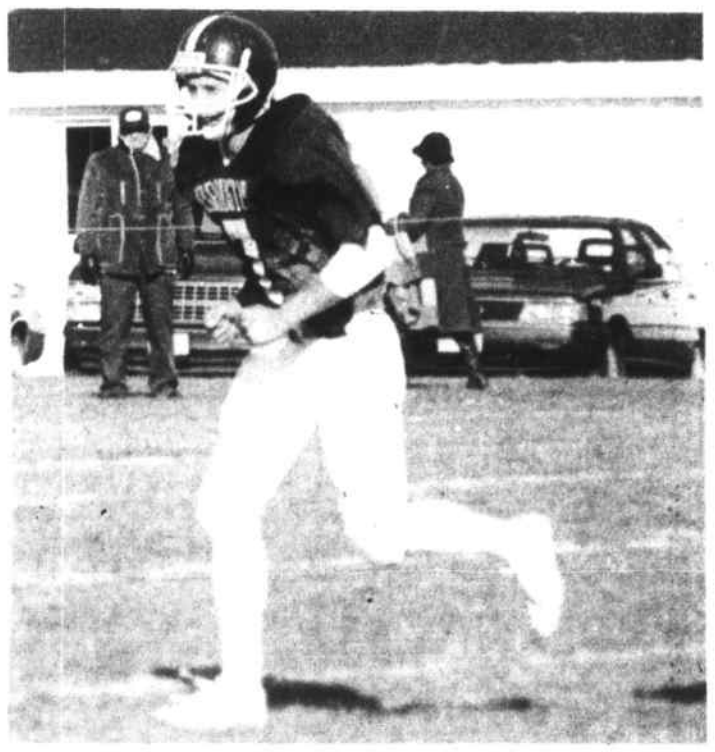

Close behind was team captain Krissie Connor. Krissie provided the kind of leadership the team needed to have a successful season, and her gutsy style of running has been an inspiration to the team.

After Krissie came Jessica Hupper, a sophomore new to the sport who has shown considerable improvement over the season. Jessica was followed across the line by Rachel Smith, Joanne McNamara and Chrissy Frotten.

Tewksbury finished 24th in this meet, which might appear to be unimpressive. However, since only the top five teams from each of the divisions and from the central and western Mass. state meets get to go to the state meet, it is clear that Tewksbury would have to be ranked as the 24th best girls' cross country team in the state. There are over 250 girls' cross-country teams in the state of Massachusetts.

This season's achievements were a fitting climax to the four year careers of the two senios on the team who have contributed so much- Krissie Connor and Chrissy Frotten. Both girls have been mainstays of the TMHS effort since they were freshmen.

For the rest of the girls, whatever their future in cross country might be, they can always say that 1987 was a very good year for Tewksbury High School.

College notebook

Tewksbury's Tim Boudreau enjoyed a fine freshmen season at Bridgton Academy. Tim is just one of many area athletes involved in college athletics. Next week's Sports Notebook will be devoted to area college athletes.

Tales of men and beasts

by Bill Conlon

Ever since the dawn of time, when a successful hunt meant it was time for feasting, the telling of hunting stories has been a favorite form of entertainment.

Little has changed in the last 100 centuries, luckily. The tools have changed, the fire has been replace with a beer and the land is growing scarce, but the stories are as good now as they ever were.

So, pop open a frosty one and sit back. Here are a few of my favorite tales of men and beasts, and the hunt that brings them together.

One of my favorite tales is from Utah, where I lived for years and where deer hunting is big business. (Would you believe kids there can take a half-day out of school on the Friday before opening day, and the newspapers are jammed with ads for "deer widow" specials, to keep the Missus busy while the boys are out of town? Big league stuff!)

One season, my hunting buddy Bob Parrinello and I were working our way through the high valleys looking for mule deer when we came upon a steep-sided valley with a few stands of aspen trees high up on the slopes.

I elected to take the high trail along the ridgetop, to flush out any hiding deer, while Bob kept to the bottom of the canyon.

After crashing through my third patch of aspens, I decided to call it quits. But when I turned to start back down, a motion to one side caught the corner of my eye.

I spotted a mulie headed downhill on full afterburners, on a parallel course with me but too far away for a shot. I thought Bob might get lucky, but looking down to the valley floor I saw him standing with his back to the deer! Uh-oh.

Then Bob suddenly spun around and fired, dropping the deer not 50 yards from where he stood. It was too far for me to "put antlers" on the critter, and I was afraid Bob had dropped a doe by mistake.

No, it was a buck alright -- a fat six pointer. But when I got to the bottom, a question dawned on me which has never been answered to my satisfaction.

Bob said he was standing in a little gully at the very bottom of the canyon, and he was ... how can I say this nicely? ... watering the sage brush at the time, his rifle propped against a bush. He said he suddenly heard pounding hooves and loud snorting, and turned just in time to see the buck bearing down on him.

In one smooth motion he snatched up his rifle, the deer turned, and a quick shot dropped the critter cold.

From that day to this, however, I've always doubted Bob's claim that he was ... uh ... zipped up when he fired. (And yes, I do give him grief over it every season.)

Another story also involves Bob, only this is one we don't ever laugh about. Bob was almost killed the following season, and we'll never know who or why, only how.

That fall, Bob and I mapped out spots to take a stand and wait for the sunrise of opening day. Bob took a position on a long bare slope and I sat in a small side canyon.

When we met for lunch, though, Bob was howling mad. And he had a good reason for being furious.

It seems that while Bob was sitting on that bare slope, shortly after dawn, he heard a whine that ended with a loud slap in the dirt, not six feet away from where he sat. It was a bullet, but nobody in sight was shooting! The only sound he heard was the whine of the bullet, but no gunshot. How odd!

Bob slid behind a rock just as a second bullet came whistling out of the blue, this time kicking up a puff of dust three feet away! Bob said he started yelling, but to no avail. In his position, I'd be yelling, too.

A third bullet came tearing out of the blue sky, this time pinging off a nearby rock. Bob said he was desperately afraid of dying on that barren hillside, but then the shooting stopped. The fusillade had ended as mysteriously as it began.

As near as we could guess, some jerk must have been shooting at a deer with the sky behind it. Since there were no gunshots heard, the bullets, we figured, must have been fired from about five miles away. The fool with the rifle never knew what kind of terror he had caused. That was too close!

We'll never know all the details, but there is a morale to this story:

Never, ever shoot at anything that has open sky behind it. A bullet can travel for miles if nothing stops it, and a hunter orange jacket makes for a horrible backstop.

Well, those are a few of my favorite deer hunting stories, but there are many, many more. Other goodies include my Uncle Jim's weird first episode with doe scent, and another is a textbook example of what buck fever can do to an otherwise normal man.

Still, I'd much rather hear your stories! (Mine will keep until mid-winter, when it gets - ahem - a bit lean for material to fill this space.)

Fair warning, though -- Don't be too surprised to read your story here once I've heard it. However, I'm amenable to deleting names if you find the tale too embarrassing.

So, give me a call at 658-2346 and tell me a story!

It's part of the ancient tradition.

The Massachusetts shotgun deer season started Monday and runs until the 9th of December. Early reports show healthy (well...) deer being brought into check stations, and the Division of Fisheries & Wildlife is looking for a good harvest this season.

As for me, I went into work late on Monday after hitting the woods outside Barre, in that frog-choking rain we had. All I got was wet, but there were a lot of deer tracks and a lot of shots nearby. I'll be back.

A lady called the Town Crier last week looking for the address of Rusty Kraynick, the Tewksbury gentleman who makes custom spinnerbaits. Seems she wanted to buy a few for her son for Christmas, and that made sense to me.

For those interested in locally-made lures for stocking stuffers, Rusty can be reached by dropping a line to Kray-Lures, 25 Patten Road, Tewksbury, 01876.

The Wildcat Basketball Girls' Division seventh and eighth grade team will be competing in the River Valley Junior High School Basketball League this winter. The players pictured are Alyssa Sellers, Sarah Callahan, Stacy LaCorcia, Leah Mazzoni, Stacey Quellette, Nicole Quellette, Lynette Berger, Kristine Robinson, Julie McDonald, Tina Kelly, Stacey Gillis, Millie Cavanaugh, Gina DeSantis, Jennifer Rago and Karen Buckley. The team is coached by Bob Sellers and Bob Fasulo.

New kids on the block

New team

The second meeting to organize the Wilmington girls' traveling basketball team was held Friday, November 20 at the July 4th Building. This team consists of 15 girls in grades seven and eight who will be playing teams from Lawrence, Methuen, Chelmsford and North Reading.

The league has been in existence for at least three years and this will be the first time that a Wilmington team has taken part.

Under the direction of Paul Gargan and Paul Cardello, the girls and their parents put their heads together and came up with ideas to defray the cost of the team. The largest costs involved paying for the gym time and the custodial fees.

A large thank you to the Wilmington Lions Club for sponsoring the team that has been completely outfitted with new uniforms.

The girls will be playing a 12 game season and participating December 19 and 20 in the Lady Falcon Basketball Tournament at Bentley College; January 16 in the Boston University Basketball Jamboree; and February 20 in the Wildcat Day at Walter Brown Arena.

Anyone wishing to help the team in any way is urged to call Paul Cardello at 658-8743.

French earns awards

David French of Tewksbury recently received the Letter Award for football at the recent Nichols College fall sports banquet.

French, a freshman majoring in general business, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip French of Tewksbury and a graduate of Tewksbury Memorial High School.

Sports deadline

The Town Crier sports deadline is Monday night at 6 p.m. Any high school or youth sports copy received after that deadline will not be included in that week's sports section.

Area coaches are reminded that schedules and team rosters are always helpful in scheduling photo assignments. Any story tips will be followed up and appreciated.

A popular teenage night club in Stoneham

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

Friday night hanging out at the mall? The movies? A friend's house? Not for the teens who have discovered Club 54 in Stoneham where they can socialize to music, make new friends, and experience an evening designed exclusively for them.

They jump at the vision of a night out at a night club. "Everyone they know" goes to this one "every" Friday night, and they clamor to be part of the show.

And show it is: their show, for almost two years now. On a typical Friday, the beat goes on and through the speakers, the dancers, and the darkened room, at any other time a function hall at 54 Montvale Ave. — otherwise known as the Montvale Plaza.

It's just like an adult night club except there is no live entertainment to speak of — the same DJ every week and an occasional lip sync contest by the kids. Sometimes there are cash prizes for the best lip sync, Halloween gear or Hawaiian costume.

It's just like a night club except there are no chairs, no tables, no hor d'oeuvres, no cocktails, and no waitresses.

It's almost like a fraternity party, but there's no shouting and no liquor. There is, however, a "cover charge" of $7, with soft drinks available at $1 each. There are the dancers, solo or together; the quiet ones sitting against the walls along the far edges of the room; the restless milling stream constantly clustering its way up, down, around the lobby. There are always eight to ten bouncers hanging tough together in tuxes around the fringes, and two Stoneham policemen.

"We must be doing something right," says Club Manager Don D'Andraia. "We're probably one of the longest lasting 'under 20' night clubs around." February will mark Club 54's second anniversary.

"We've gone against every philosophy in club management," he continues. "It's a pretty room but it's not a night club room. The kids like it because of the size of the dance floor and because it's self-contained." The room is plush though — glittering chandeliers; glistening mirrors; a luxurious red, cream and blue atmosphere, the soft rich colors hardly visible. The scene will be transformed overnight, the site of a wedding reception the next day.

The average age of the "under 20's" is 16, not too many 18 and 19 year olds, lots of 14's and 15's, mostly sophomores and juniors. Although the club advertised when it first opened, ads have not been necessary for a while. The weekly party flourishes without them, with special programs announced each night for the ensuing four weeks. Each week, a base of 200 to 250 regulars drifts in from Woburn, Reading, Winchester, Wakefield, Melrose and lately, Billerica and Chelmsford. The Club averages 400 "members" each Friday. They come to have fun, and they return for more of the same. Special needs teens have arrived in groups for a very special night out at Club 54, and been warmly received by their "peers."

Management knew there was a market for this, and management went for it. The only other similar club in the area is in Saugus. "Very few kids come to hang out," says D'Andraia. "We don't let them. If we see a group forming, we keep them moving."

If kids leave the building during the course of the

FM TALK: Thoughts that crossed our far-flung correspondent's mind this week:

OUR GREAT and good buddy, Tony Resta, local bartender-rock star- producer, is making a name for himself in a whole new area of the music profession: radio and tv jingles. His first big break came recently when he landed the job of producing a radio and tv jingle for another great and good buddy of ours, Mark Smith, who is president of Mark Pontiac-GMC Trucks, in Woburn. Mark heard Tony perform, instantly became hooked on his native talent, and asked him to go to work on the Mark Pontiac jingle. Well, it's done, and if you haven't heard the commercial that's resulted from Tony's (and his band's) hours of hard work, you're bound to soon. Mark has the new commercial playing in almost every top radio station in Boston. You'll also have the chance to catch Mark in his tv commercials, since he decided to pass over this columnist and to use himself in the tv ads. You'll spot him right off — he's wearing a beard and he interviews himself.

IF YOU'RE planning to celebrate this New Year's Eve, it might be wise to consider taking advantage of one of the many package deals being offered by local hotels. For the most part, the deals include a room for the night, which would keep you off the road during the wee hours following the magical stroke of midnight. It might be a smart move to consider staying where you are, even if you don't plan to drink alcohol that night. The local hotels recognize the importance of serving alcohol responsibly, so they're going all out to make sure you have a good time and remain safe. For instance, several of the local hotels offering special packages are the Ramada Inn, in Woburn, and the Days Inn and Marriott Hotel, in Burlington. The Marriott is offering a special ballroom package which includes entertainment, party favors, a dinner and a room for the evening. In some cases there are cover charges for entry into the lounges, so it would also be wise to call the hotels in advance to find out the details of their packages.

WE RECENTLY met up with a fellow from Germany by the name of Hans Matuszak, an engineer for Nixdorf, who had an interesting tale to tell us. In Germany, Hans owns a new turbo-charged Audi, which he loves to drive on the autobahn. "It is easy for me to open up my car to speeds in excess of 170 miles per hour," he told us. "In America, very few people know what kind of feeling that is. The minute you go over sixty-five here, the police pull you over." On the autobahn, the police seldom pull motorists over, regardless of how fast they are travelling. Well, Hans Matuszak boasts that he is one German who has been pulled over for speeding on the autobahn. "Well, not speeding, exactly," he explained. "What happened was, I was going 170 miles per hour, and I passed a police car on the right!" Apparently, you can drive as fast as you want on the autobahn, but passing on the righthand side is a severe no-no; when you think about it, you can understand why.

WELL, IT'S official: the site of the old Jason's nightclub, on Clarendon Street, in Boston, will become the new home of

Emergency Health Care Card is available

Winchester Hospital is offering an Emergency Health Care Card Program to benefit residents of the communities in its health care service area.

Eugene E. Loubier, president of Winchester Hospital, said, "Trauma victims can arrive in our Emergency Room unconscious or confused. Since it may not be possible to effectively communicate with them, we have no way of knowing their medical history, whom to contact, and other vital information we need to administer correct treatment. Precious time can be spent searching for information when it could be spent treating the patient."

The Winchester Hospital Emergency Health Card enables a person to carry a complete set of medical records at all times. The microfilm chip in it contains a signed consent form authorizing emergency medical treatment, names of people to notify in an emergency, a personal physician's name and address, medication and dosages, blood type, insurance data, optional organ donor and living will information, immunization records, and other health information.

One aspect of the emergency care card will be of special interest to cardiac patients. Space is available on the card for a microfilm of an electrocardiogram (EKG). Patients with a history of cardiac-related difficulty can be assured that emergency personnel will know their cardiac history wherever they may be, without undue delay.

The card is designed to be carried next to a person's driver's license, where emergency personnel look first.

Taking a look at No. Reading's history

By JIM ROUILLARD

Forty acres of land once went for a cow.

Even more may have gone for red riding breeches.

And the buyer rode home in his wife's petticoat.

The town of North Reading today seems a generally quiet place — but it's a spot which may have begun life, according to one historian at least, in a kind of muted fever of land-grabbing.

The town's historical roots are to be found in a grant of land made by the Massachusetts General Court in 1651. A few earlier, special grants had been made, according to Samuel LePage, to various people who had somehow assisted in the establishment of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. These include a peer of the realm who turned the land over as quick as he could to make a profit.

The rest went to commoners.

So this "Platt of Land," which we know today as North Reading, "butted and bounded" by black oak, pine and walnut, the Bear Meadow swamp and the great (Ipswich) river — really first enters the historical picture as a two-mile addition of territory to the town of "Redding," which then included present-day Wakefield and Reading.

"It does not appear that anything was done immediately about this new acquisition," LePage continues in his tercentenary edition "A History of North Reading." Seven years later allotments were made to those who, in accordance with the rules concerning commoners, were eligible.

"Judging from what happened later it would seem that this praying of the General Court for additional land was not so much because the new town needed the land, as it was a manifestation of the land-grabbing tendencies of these early settlers. None of those receiving land ever went north of the river to live ... All allotments were either sold or willed to members of the family."

In any case, by the time the North Parish — North Reading's direct ancestor — had been established in 1713, land had passed to, among others, the grandson of a Danvers woman executed for witchcraft and a rather enterprising man named John Upton.

On April Fool's Day, 1667, according to Middlesex County land records, Upton obtained forty acres of upland from Isaac Hart for "one cow." And yet even before this, according to LePage, Upton had first secured title to land in North Reading in a still more interesting fashion:

"Arrayed in a pair of bright red riding breeches he, with his wife ... rode across the river and were met by Indians who had left their summer camping grounds in New Hampshire and had come to camp near the Ipswich for the Winter. The chief of the tribe was very much intrigued by the flashing wearing apparel and wanted them for himself.

"He and Upton bargained and it was finally agreed that the breeches were to be exchanged for land. Upton wanted to return home and change, but the chief was afraid the bargain might escape him, so he demanded that the trousers be handed over then and there. In order to oblige, Upton and his wife retired to the brush where Mrs. Upton removed one of her six petticoats and her doughty husband, minus his pants, appeared in kilts after the fashion of his ancestors."

There is no certainty however, according to LePage, as to who was the first actually to settle in the part of old Reading which lay north of the Bear Meadow swamp. Town records for 1677 indicate that John Upton was granted the right to have a saw mill on the Ipswich, indicating he was already established in the region.

As a probable response to the King Philip Indian War of 1675, LePage notes, there had been a petition from the northlanders for additional inhabitants in 1676:

"Only the hardy ones heard the petition," he assumes, "but they came and by 1685" nine families are known to have been established as living in the land which now comprises North Reading.

Like most chroniclers of life in early New England, LePage waxes eloquent on the hardships the first colonists faced:

"Today we can hardly appreciate the task that lay before these early settlers. The land had to be cleared of trees and stones. Somehow the logs had to be hauled to the saw mill and the lumber for the new house hauled back again...

"Then there were the wild animals. The meadow land separating these pioneers from their neighbors to the South was not without purpose called Bear Meadow. In 1685 a bounty of 15 shillings was offered to anyone who killed a bear...

"As late as 1706 a group (of Indians) fell upon the Harnden household in the western part of the Parish while the father was away. The mother and three children were killed and the remaining five children carried away."

Despite John Upton and his colorful means of obtaining land from the Indians, in order to regularize the process, the General Court had assumed ownership of the land and granted title deeds.

Yet, according to LePage, "there still lingered in the minds of some of the Puritans the thoughts that the Indians had some claim to the land. More than one timid settler who fled in the face of the danger lost his home to someone claiming an Indian title.

"(And so) eventually the General Court stepped in and called a halt... In 1701 the practice was entirely prohibited

Kristine and Jim Catalano live in Lowell, but selected New England Memorial for the birth of their baby because of the Stoneham hospital's tradition of family-centered and highly personalized maternity services. In an effort to continue offering expectant families the best in maternity services, NEMH will open a new maternity unit early next year.

The Catalano baby was delivered by Dr. Jeffrey Sondler, OB/GYN, who also provided prenatal care to the Catalanos. Dr. Sondler's office is located at 92 High Street, in Medford, Mass.

70,000 Beautiful Poinsettias, 400 Acres of Fragrant Trees, & 25,000 Balsam Wreaths.

Don't miss our Open House in Winchester Fri. Dec. 4, 9am-9pm Refreshments

Just a few good reasons to shop at Mahoney's this Christmas.

For over 25 years we've made Christmas shopping at Mahoney's an anticipated tradition instead of an annual chore. Don't forget to bring the kids. They'll want to say hi to Santa Claus, and visit the llamas, goats, deer and lambs in Santa's farm.

Christmas Trees
Explore our unending forest of Christmas trees. You'll be surrounded with the fragrance of freshly cut Balsam firs, Douglas firs, Fraser firs, and Scotch pines. We have thousands on display, from the quaint to the magnificent, at every price range.

Mahoney's Special. Top quality Balsams from our own 400 acre plantation.
$19.98

Poinsettias
We're famous for our 70,000 red, white and pink poinsettias. As soon as you see them, you'll know why. They're rounder, fuller, more healthy looking, and produce more flowers and dense, deep green foliage.

Mahoney's Special. Our own multi-flowered poinsettia with 3 to 4 flowers.
$3.98

Everything Else for the Holidays
Countless Balsam wreaths, holly, mistletoe, Christmas tree stands, lights, decorations, wrapping paper, firewood, holiday arrangements, fruit baskets—if it's on your Christmas list, we'll probably have it.

Boston's very own Hard Rock Cafe. The Hard Rock is scheduled to begin construction in February, and it is expected to open its doors sometime in early summer. I love the Hard Rocks in other cities, such as London, New York, L.A. and Chicago, and I'm looking forward to seeing this one open. While on the subject of new clubs, Mardi Gras, in the theatre district, opened recently, and it is doing one heck of a business. It advertises it's trying to attract an older (over twenty-five) crowd, but so far it has been drawing all ages, especially the early-twenties crowd. That's O.K., though, the club is still worth taking in.

WHAT WASN'T worth the effort was the Bet of the Year, placed by another friend of ours, Lenny Manupelli, of Woburn. Lenny heard Las Vegas was offering one million to one odds that the LA Clippers of the NBA would make it to the NBA finals next spring. Well, Lenny decided to place his bet, and now he's following the Clippers, anxiously waiting to see them make the finals so he can collect his million bucks. The last time this columnist checked, however, the Clippers weren't doing too well in the standings, and I suspect it will be an uphill battle for them again this season. Frankly, Lenny, I think you blew your one collar on nothing.

NOW IT'S time to sneak in my favorite entertainment suggestions for this weekend. As for the movies, there's only one terrific entry this weekend, and that's "Nuts," with Barbra Streisand and Richard Dreyfuss. If going to a movie doesn't thrill you, how about picking up a book and cuddling with it for a few hours? A terrific suggestion there is Margaret Truman's "Murder in the CIA," which has just come out in hardback. Truman has written a whole series of "Murder in..." novels, and they are all wonderfully delightful reading. Her last one, "Murder in Georgetown," is one of the best mystery novels of the year. By the way, Margaret Truman is the daughter of President Harry and Bess Truman.

ONE FINAL point: we would like to extend our hearty congratulations to the members of the Woburn High School football team for their outstanding sportsmanship on the field this year. Good luck in the Division 1 Superbowl this Saturday, and good going, coach.

"There are only two forces in the world, the sword and the spirit. In the long run the sword will always be conquered by the spirit." — Napoleon Bonaparte.

Make it a good week.

under penalty of a fine and imprisonment. Perhaps the law was not always obeyed. No law ever was, even in the days of the Puritans."

Still, LePage continues, "in spite of unproductive land, bears, Indians and land sharks, these intrepid (settlers) made a beginning. That they lived an isolated life goes without saying. There was not even a bridle path across the Ipswich and the Bear Meadow Swamp. When they desired to attend church on a Sabbath morning, it was necessary for those in the eastern part of the new settlement to make their way to Danvers, while those of the western part made their way up the river to a ford and thence back down to the mother church in the southern end of town.

"To those who had no social outlet and who desired to attend divine services this seemed like an intolerable situation." And so, for the usual reason, the difficulty of traveling long and hard distances to the meeting house, agitation began for establishment of North Reading as a separate entity, and "the ones concerned, in 1696, inspired the town to vote that 'as soon as there was a suitable and competent number of inhabitants (north of the river), they might call, settle, and maintain a godly, learned and orthodox minister of their own.'"

Yet the task was to prove somewhat longer and rather more difficult than anticipated.

THE WOBURN MALL was the scene of some busy holiday shopping activity this past weekend as evidenced by the full parking lot Inside the mall it was just as crowded as hundreds of eager shoppers searched for just the right gift. evening, they find they have left for the evening. Hanging around in front of the plaza is not allowed, and the place does not close down until everyone has found a ride home — whether via parent or taxi. "Parents sometimes forget to pick up their kids," says D'Andraia.

That's not to say there hasn't been the potential for more serious problems. "I'm at the front door for most of the evening," he says. "You can usually smell trouble when it starts to come in. We've had it, and we know how to deal with it. Besides, there are no tough kids in Woburn and Billerica."

Basically, we run a safe club, a place where parents don't mind bringing their children," he says. "We get a lot of members of the Winchester, Reading and Stoneham football teams and they all get along well. No problems, whatsoever."

The DJ plays requests, the top 20 and the oldies, whatever the kids want to hear. Smoking, gum, sneakers and jeans are apparently allowed as long as the latter two are "neat and presentable." Tank tops and short shorts are tabu. The hairstyles, the dress and the language overheard: no different from what you'd find today in any high school, in Stoneham and every town around it.

Although the management did try decorating the room, serving up free snacks, and making tables available, the clientele was absolutely not interested. "They come for the music and the crowds, and they come to dance," says D'Andraia.

D'Andraia invites hesitant parents to drop by, walk through, check out Club 54 for themselves. "We have survived because of the parents," he says. "Most kids are dropped off and picked up in groups of four or five. If the parents didn't feel good about the atmosphere, they wouldn't keep coming."

The music plays "full blast" all night long. Most of the kids arrive between 8 and 9 p.m. The last dance takes place at 11:20 p.m.

It's just for them, and they love it all.

LE GRAND DAVID

Two vintage theatres in downtown Beverly fill North Shore weekends with magic this season.

Now in its second decade and with two shows at two different historic theatres, Le Grand David and his own Spectacular Magic Company continues its long residence here. At the 1920 Cabot Street Cinema Theatre, it's "Le Grand David and his own Spectacular Magic Company," presented Sunday afternoons at 3 p.m. At the 1912 Larcom Theatre, it's "Le Grand David — In Concert," presented Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings in December (December 3, 4, 5, 10, 11, 12, 17, 18 and 19) at 7:30 p.m., and on Saturday afternoons in January (January 2 and 16) at 1:45 p.m.

The Cabot and Larcom productions offer two completely different shows of stage magic, each with its own illusions, choreography, costumes, curtains and variety numbers.

Tickets for both productions are on sale now at the Cabot Street Cinema Theatre box office, open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily. For further information, call (617) 927-3677.

HOLIDAY AT PAUL REVERE HOUSE

The Paul Revere House, Boston's oldest home, and the Pierce/Hichborn House will be open for special holiday festivities on Friday, December 4, from 4 to 6:30 p.m. and on Saturday, December 5, from 1:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Eighteenth century decorations, music, and refreshments will make the celebrations merry, while museum guides in period clothing will help recreate the atmosphere of holidays past. Admission prices will be: $3 for adults, $2.50 for senior citizens and college students, and $1 for children under 17.

The houses are located in the historic North End at 19 North Square, a five minute walk from Quincy Market. For more information, call (617) 523-2338.

HOLIDAY SALE AT UMBRELLA

The artisans of the Emerson Umbrella Center for the Arts in Concord are presenting their Fourth Annual Holiday Sale on December 11, 12 and 13.

The public is invited to meet individual artists in their studios and purchase fine arts and unique crafts ranging from pottery to hand-painted ornaments.

This Holiday Sale event will begin with an artists' reception on Friday, December 11 at 6 p.m. and will feature live music by resident instrument makers, refreshments and a raffle.

The Holiday Sale will continue on Saturday, December 12, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday, December 13, from noon to 5 p.m. Arrive early on Saturday as there will be free hand-crafted cups for the first fifty customers.

WINTERSAUCE WONDERLAND

On Sunday, December 13, in the historic Faneuil Hall at Quincy Market, the Wintersauce Chorale will open its 1987-88 series, featuring a 16 member chorus, the Jazz Pops Ensemble and harpist Martha Moor, under the musical direction of George Guilbault. "Wintersauce Wonderland" will be what has become "a welcome tradition" (Boston Globe) presented in the style of a holiday party — featuring a medley of choral and instrumental arrangements of children's favorites, classical and religious pieces and jazz versions of popular songs. Beginning at 3 p.m., the program will also include arrangements from the chorale's recently released compact disc "A Wintersauce Christmas" (MMG-Vox Prima MWCD 7166).

Selections and arrangements from the program follow: Winter Wonderland arr. George Guilbault; The Little Drummer Boy arr. Harry Simeone; It's the Most Wonderful Time of the Year arr. William D. Brohn; White Christmas arr. Brohn; Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer; Santa Claus Is Comin' to Town arr. Joseph Gianono; Good King Wenceslas; and Home For Hanukkah.

Tickets are $16 preferred seating (reserved), $12.50 general admission and $6 students and senior citizens. Available in advance at Bostix/Ticketron (Faneuil Hall, Burlington, Braintree), Out of Town Tickets, Harvard Square or by calling (617) 437-0231. Subscriptions are available. For information, call (617) 437-0231.

Roberta LaCascia appointed

Cornerstone Child Care Centers, Inc., has announced the appointment of Roberta LaCascia of Winchester as director of the Winchester Hospital employees' children's day care center.

LaCascia holds a degree in Early Childhood Education from North Shore Community College. Within the last five years, she has served as director at Fidelity House Preschool in Arlington and a childcare facility in Medford.

The child development center is scheduled to open in late November. It will be located at Winchester Hospital and will be open weekdays from 6:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. to care for children aged one month to seven years.

LaCascia said, "We see our center as an extension of the family and want hospital employees to know their children are in a safe, supportive and clean environment. Parents will be encouraged to visit their children whenever they can."

The staff at this new facility will include several teachers and aides. Each will be responsible for care of a small group of children. Key components of the curriculum are nutrition education, health education, and provision of a homelike atmosphere. LaCascia stressed she will be promoting an open, objective center which supports an individual child's needs.

The child development center at Winchester Hospital is one of a network of centers managed by Cornerstone Child Care Centers, Inc., of Lexington. The company is responsible for training and supervising the staff. Each month directors meet to discuss common concerns and issues.

Nancy Bailey, director of Operations at Cornerstone, commented that she is pleased to have LaCascia on her staff. "Her quiet, competent, caring approach to people and her extensive experience in the field are just what we wanted.

Stephen Favorito assumes ownership of Solo-Pak

READING — On December 15, 1987, Stephen Favorito of Boston and Derry, New Hampshire will become Cooperate owner and director of Solo-Pak Hearing Aid Center in Reading. Solo-Pak has been in business in reading for forty years. Active in the industry for eighteen years, Favorito has been associated with Solo-Pak as Vice President for the past six years.

The Reading office maintains a staff of two doctors and four audiologists, all certified by the National Board for Certification in Hearing Instrument Services. A medical facility, Solo-Pak is equipped to deal with all problems associated with hearing loss. Field audiologists are able to make home visits for home testing and fitting of appliances. Solo-Pak also does maintenance and repair work, with 24 hour emergency service.

Favorito reports that the cooperation will open offices in Cambridge, in January of 1988, and in Derry, New Hampshire in June of 1988. Solo-Pak plans further expansion over the next two years with ten additional offices all over the East Coast and New England.

Hyperactive behavior

Hyperactivity has been called the most common childhood behavior disorder. What is hyperactivity? When a child is constantly fidgety, aggressive, impulsive, reckless, unable to concentrate or listen, or generally "won't keep still for two minutes," hyperactivity is often suggested.

Child psychiatrists urge parents not to assume hyperactivity simply because of a child's objectionable behavior. It is normal for any child to be fidgety and impulsive at times, as he or she transitions through normal developmental stages.

Parents with hyperactive children who have joined support organizations like ACLD, Association for Children with Learning Disabilities, or the Association for Neurologically Handicapped Children, say that research into hyperactivity has helped their children and their families.

Childhood hyperactivity, learning disabilities and minimal brain dysfunction have been studied since the 1930's. Studies reveal that from 1-15 percent of children are hyperactive. This disorder occurs more often in children under the age of seven, and more often in boys. Some child psychiatrists recognize hyperactivity as "developmental lag," possibly caused by a biochemical deficiency. A number of children seem to grow out of the behavior, but many do not.

Parents whose children consistently seem to show signs of hyperactivity should see a physician or psychologist for a diagnostic evaluation. If the consultant determines that the child has a learning disability or minimal brain dysfunction, a multifacted treatment approach will probably be discussed including medication, behavior modification and therapy.

TREATMENT

Medication — Stimulants have been used since the syndrome was first described, and are found to have a calming effect. Common medications are Ritalin, Dexedrine, Cylert. They may produce side effects such as insomnia, irritability, or poor appetite. More recently anti-depressants, particularly Desipramine have been prescribed. Medications should be under the supervision of the child's physician or a child psychiatrist.

Therapy — Generally therapy emphasizes consistency, clear rules, positive reinforcement and social activities with 1-2 others at most.

If you have any questions on childhood behavior and would like more information, please call the Human Resource Institute clinic nearest you. Information in this article was provided by Children Today, published by the National Institute of Mental Health.

CHILDREN FOR BUSY PARENTS

Tot Memos, a new newsletter, written about children for busy parents, day care directors, teachers, and other professionals providing care and knowledge to children is now available by yearly subscriptions. Tot Memos is written and published by Carol Ronco, a professional educated and experienced in the field of psychology and education. Carol, who is also a parent and grandparent, lives in Reading and has developed this educational newsletter for parents and educators to provide information about children's and parents' needs whether it is developmental, psychological, social, or emotional. The newsletter will also deal with the child's daily activities and nutritional concepts.

Tot Memos is offering a monthly publication that will provide a variety of topics that will be concise but informative. Because time is of the essence for parents, teachers and child care professionals, Tot Memos will offer information relating to infants, toddlers, preschoolers and the adults in their lives that is written professionally and concisely. Various topics to be included in future issues are working parents, single parents, parental stress, suggested books, tapes, and videos, humor, etc. Any questions that parents and educators might have regarding children are welcome. For further information or for a sample issue write to Tot Memos, 68 Grant St., Reading, Ma. 01867 or call 944-7260.

INSURANCE COST TO BUSINESS

"Insuring the Uninsured: The Cost to Business" will be the topic of the Wednesday, December 9 conference, sponsored by the Merrimack Valley Business Group on Health and Health Planning of the North Shore and Merrimack Valley. The featured speakers will be the following: Dennis G. Austin, Manager, Community and State Legislative Relations, Raytheon; Robert F. Fanning, President, Beverly Hospital; Edward Marakovitz, Executive Director, Health Planning of the North Shore and Merrimack Valley; Steven Tringale, Vice President for Health Policy, Life Insurance Association of Massachusetts; and John Chapman, Director of the Hospital Bureau, Massachusetts Rate Setting Commission.

The meeting will be held from 8 to 11:30 a.m. at the Sheraton Rolling Green, 311 Lowell Street, Andover. The cost of the conference is $45 per person, including buffet breakfast. For further information or to register, please call 531-7006 or 593-0246.

PAY ATTENTION TO WANTS, NEEDS

People over 55 years of age now comprise one-quarter of America's population.

According to Entrepreneur magazine, the elderly also represent the nation's richest age group, and account for one half of the country's wealth.

In the future, the elderly will be healthier and better able to enjoy their funds, meaning a higher level of self-sufficiency. Longer life expectancies coupled with advances in health care ensure that the age at which people are considered old will rise. In just 30 years, over one-third of America will fall into this 55 and older category, creating a need for specialized goods and services catering specifically to their needs.

Business opportunities will boom for those who can foresee the needs of this group and supply the goods and services to meet it.

Businesses traditionally catering to elderly people, such as travel services for the self-sufficient and nursing homes for the less mobile, will prosper even more than they do now.

The elderly will need errands performed, shopping done, food prepared, and in-home care. The demand for companion services for those living alone, maid services for people no longer agile enough to clean and chauffer services for those unable to drive themselves, will certainly increase.

According to Entrepreneur, as today's baby boomers age, they will not want to give up some aspects of the good life to which they've become accustomed, simply because they are older.

For example, people accustomed to a fast-paced, cosmopolitan lifestyle will probably continue eating meals out. Restaurant owners should pay attention to creating a relaxed, comfortable atmosphere attuned to older patrons' special needs.

Older people may be seeking specialized exercise classes, dating services, lessons, social groups or clubs — or anything else that younger people currently enjoy. On a more personal level, an entire industry is springing up in which people prepare medical claims for those too old or overwhelmed to do it themselves.

Two retail areas have already been singled out as benefitting from an increasingly older clientele, according to Entrepreneur. These are optical goods, and over-sized clothing. Here, sensitivity is the key.

12TH LEADING HOUSING MARKET

With 27,800 housing starts, Boston will rank as the nation's 12th leading residential construction market in 1988, predicts Chicago Title Insurance Co.

Housing starts in the market are projected to be up 5 percent over projected 1987 totals of 26,600. However, by the end of next year, housing starts in the market (Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area) will be up 153 percent since 1984.

Nationally, Chicago Title is projecting that housing starts will top 1.7 million next year. Construction will continue to rebound in many of the nation's older, more traditional markets in the Northeast and Midwest. For example, since 1984, housing starts are up 126 percent in Detroit, 91 percent in Milwaukee, 84 percent in Chicago and 79 percent in Cleveland.

However, these gains are being offset by declines in energy-driven Sun belt markets.

Los Angeles, with 65,000 housing starts, will be the nation's leading residential construction market, followed by Riverside-San Bernardino, Calif., 49,600; Atlanta, 44,800; Washington, D.C., 42,000; Chicago, 41,500; San Diego, 38,500; Phoenix, 37,400; and Minneapolis-St. Paul, 30,100.

More tax reforms next year

According to Joseph M. Flynn, CPA Partner with Arthur Young and a member of the Federal Taxation Committee of the Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants, Inc., tax brackets will change dramatically in 1988. Several other provisions will change as well.

The most dramatic change will be in the tax rate structure. This year, there are five brackets ranging from 11 percent to 38.5 percent. In 1988, the brackets are reduced to three: 15, 28 and 33 percent. For many people, the new tax brackets are good news because they will result in lower taxes. For example, a married couple with a combined taxable income of $32,000 will pay $107 less in taxes under the new brackets compared to 1987.

It's not all good news, however. The couple with a taxable income of $32,000 will be in the same bracket as a couple with a taxable income of $70,000 — a marked difference from the highly progressive tax rate of just two years ago.

The new tax rates also mean higher taxes for some people with low incomes. For a single person, tax on a taxable income of $15,000 will be $2,178 for 1987, but for 1988, taxes on the same taxable income jump to $2,250.

The deduction for consumer interest also changes in 1988. For 1987, interest on consumer credit other than qualified home mortgage interest is only 65 percent deductible.

Long-term capital gains for high income people also face a tax change in 1988. The maximum rate on long-term capital gains was limited to 28 percent in 1987. For next year, the 28 percent cap has been lifted. As a result, taxpayers in the 33 percent bracket face an increase of five percent in their taxes on long-term capital gains.

Not All Bad News

Change in the 1988 tax code is not all bad news, however.

Taxpayers are getting a bigger standard deduction and personal exemption. For single taxpayers, the standard deduction increases to $3,000 from $2,540. For those married and filing jointly, the deduction increases to $5,000 from $3,760. Married but filing separately jumps to $2,500 from $1,880. Heads of households get an increase to $4,400 from $2,540.

The personal exemption also rises to $1,950 from $1,900. For those 65 or over or who are blind, there is an extra standard deduction of $600 if married, or $750 if single. These extra standard deductions replace the extra personal exemptions that have been repealed. For those both elderly and blind, two extra standard deductions are allowed.

Joseph Flynn notes that while these changes don't take effect until 1988, they may influence your tax planning now.

Bangladesh women cycle to social change

As a child, Louise Cormier gleefully rode her bicycle through the picturesque Quebec countryside near her home outside Montreal.

"I never thought that knowing how to ride a bicycle would make a difference in the lives of women thousands of miles away in Asia," Cormier says.

"I certainly didn't ever dream women would be shunned by their husbands and other men, harassed in public or even have stones thrown at them for pedaling a bicycle."

Cormier is a development specialist for CARE, the international relief and development organization, and she works in rural areas of Bangladesh.

With nearly 100 million people crammed into a country the size of Wisconsin, Bangladesh is the world's most densely populated nation and one of its poorest. Its people receive little formal education, and suffer from malnutrition and many diseases virtually eradicated in developed nations.

For Cormier and the dozens of poor women with whom she works, riding bicycles brought them squarely into conflict with centuries-old tradition that restricts women in Bangladesh from any role other than staying at home to cook for her husband and bear his children.

The drama began innocently enough, when CARE sought a convenient and economical mode of transportation for community health promoters trained in one of its projects.

Some of the women who participate are designated as "coaches," and they are hired to travel to villages in the region to pass on what they have learned to their neighbors.

Using colorful posters and other props, the health coaches discuss malnutrition and how it can be prevented by eating a balanced diet. They also talk about how innoculations and simple precautions can help prevent some of the common diseases that plague the poor of Bangladesh.

"It's a case of local women talking to other women," Cormier says. "They have a credibility and establish a rapport that an outsider might never have."

With little public transportation, the health instructors were grounded in their own villages until Sandra Laumark, who pioneered the program for CARE, hit upon the bicycle as an answer to their transportation needs.

But in Bangladesh, bicycling is reserved for men. The women were afraid to ride bikes. Some even talked about dropping out of the program.

Laumark, who has since moved on to Mali where she directs CARE's operations throughout that West African nation, still vividly remembers some of the problems she faced getting the women even to sit on a bicycle.

"Most of them were in tears," Laumark recalls. "We had to take them by the hand, sit them on the bikes and put their feet on the pedals."

The training sessions were made even more awkward by cultural taboos about using your left hand and touching someone's feet.

As an incentive, the women were offered a prize of an extra month's pay if they rode their bikes to work. Those who did ran into another problem when their traditional outfit, the sari, kept getting caught up in the bicycles' spokes. Some string and a good knot soon solved that.

The once-hestitant women mastered bicycling so easily that many graduated to motorized bicycles, and some ride motorcycles.

"One woman got so involved in cycling, she started making repairs to her bike. She took it apart piece by piece and reassembled it," Cormier says. "We call her the mechanic."

For their own protection, the women went out initially in pairs and were accompanied by a male bodyguard. Many were heckled, some were jeered. Others were the targets of stones or were jostled. The harassment only stiffened their resolve. Husbands who were reluctant became supportive of their wives' cycling after they saw how important it was to their work.

A few indignant men may still heckle them, but the women have been accepted in their new roles. Meanwhile, Laumark has begun a similar program in Mali, where dozens of women health monitors and agricultural extension agents travel to remote villages on motorized bikes.

"It's ironic how the simple little things in life often prompt the biggest change," Cormier says.

Speaker has help for suicide survivors

Adina Wrobleski, suicidologist from Minneapolis, Minn., will speak on Sunday, December 6.

She was invited here by the Balter Institute as part of an Open House and mini conference celebrating the opening of the Institute. The title of her speech is "Suicide: What We Must Do!"

The speech is offered in cooperation with the Division of Graduate and Continuing Education, Salem State College.

Wrobleski is a professional speaker who knows about suicide personally and professionally. In 1979 her daughter, Lynn, shot and killed herself. As a result of this, she undertook a long, intensive, and continuing study of the subject of suicide.

Wrobleski says, "Suicide is a behavior that leads to death, and it is poorly understood. We have been hampered for centuries by the taboo and stigma placed on suicide."

"In the past, the easy thing has been to blame families for suicide. People believed that if families had just loved and understood the person well enough, he or she would not have killed him/herself."

She is noted for her knowledge and work with suicide survivors — people grieving a suicide death. A research paper she wrote on the problems of grief after suicide was one of four selected for publication in the journal, "Israel Journal of Psychiatry." It will also be included with seventy-five other papers in a book, "Grief and Bereavement in Contemporary Society."

Wrobleski was also one of 160 people invited by Surgeon General Everett Koop to participate in a workshop on self-help in Los Angeles this fall.

She was part of a delegation this summer at a conference sponsored by the National Institute of Mental Health to foster better, and more cooperative efforts, between professionals and parents of emotionally disturbed or mentally ill young people.

For registration information, contact the Balter Institute, 54 Jeffrey Neck Road, Ipswich, Mass. 01938, telephone (617) 356-0196.

Free financial aid calendars

Students in need of funding for the current and next academic terms were urged today to order a free financial aid planning calendar from The Scholarship Bank. This vital planner includes critical aid deadlines, addresses and phone numbers of aid sources and tips on applying for aid.

According to the director, Steve Danz, over 500 million dollars is available in private aid to college students, and in many cases can cover up to twenty-five percent of a student's annual college costs. These funds are contributed by corporations, trade, civic and non-profit foundations. They are normally awarded on non-traditional bases, such as academic standing, college major, geographic preferences, and even on a student's willingness to undertake a special research project or enter a contest. Parental factors such as union, employer or military affiliation is also considered by some donors.

The Scholarship Bank works with financial aid offices throughout the U.S. to distribute information on the over 5,000 sources. Interested students may receive a computer-generated print-out of up to 65 sources of private financial aid that they appear specifically qualified to receive. According to the director, many sources are renewable annually and have an average value in excess of $1,000.

Students interested in receiving the free aid calendar and information on the scholarship programs should send a stamped, business-sized self-addressed envelope to The Scholarship Bank, 4626 N. Grand, Covina, Ca. 91724.

Trivia

"One berry, one kiss," wrote American author Washington Irving about mistletoe. But National Wildlife magazine reports that the custom of kissing under the mistletoe goes back much further than the 19th century. According to Norse mythology, the Goddess Frigga made the plant a symbol of love and promised to bestow a kiss on all who passed under it.

Home Care Week

MELROSE — The week of Nov. 29 — Dec. 5 is officially designated as Home Care Week in Massachusetts and throughout the nation.

This is a time when those who provide health care to patients in their homes reflect on their roles and their accomplishments during the past 12 months.

"Home care is the provision of a comprehensive array of services designed to help an elderly or disabled person who might otherwise be confined to an institution to remain in the community," explains Eda George, head of the Department of Continuing Care at Melrose-Wakefield Hospital.

"Home care is also available to families or individuals troubled by a variety of health and social problems who need help to improve the quality of their lives," she said. Such services include homemaking, home health aide services, nursing care, rehabilitative therapy, social work, case management, nutrition, counselling, transportation, medical equipment, chore services, respite care and companion services.

Melrose-Wakefield Hospital's home care program is rather unique because it is "hospital-based." This means the patient has access to all hospital services, and all the medical expertise offered at the hospital, at any time. It also means that there is a "continuity of care" for the patient who is hospitalized at Melrose-Wakefield and who chooses the home care program upon discharge.

In Massachusetts, there are only 11 "hospital-based" home care programs operating at present.

Because Melrose-Wakefield Hospital recently had its accreditation renewed for the maximum three-year period by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals, clients of the Melrose-Wakefield Home Care program can be assured that the services they receive and the personnel who provide the services both meet the latest nationwide standards of excellence in health care.

Members of the hospital's home care staff make approximately 140 visits a week to clients in Melrose, Wakefield, Saugus, Malden, Stoneham, Reading and surrounding communities. Over the course of a year, they make more than 7,000 such visits.

"The provision of home support services is in the best interest of the community," said Ms. George. "Most people prefer to remain in their own homes and do better there. Family life is easier to maintain than to rebuild if disrupted, and home care, in most cases, is a desirable and economical alternative to institutional care."

Ms. George pointed out that, at Melrose-Wakefield, patients making the transition from the hospital to home are assigned a "home care coordinator" if they will be receiving further care. The coordinator's job is to make the transition as smooth as possible for the patient.

"We often see patients and their families at a time of crisis," she said, "and it gives us a great deal of satisfaction to be able to set up safe, effective home care programs that will help foster their recovery to the fullest extent possible."

Home care services are certified for reimbursement by the major insurers, and by Medicare and Medicaid. Some health maintenance organizations (HMOs) also provide home care coverage.

The Museum of Science salutes the holidays

The Boston Museum of Science heralds the holiday season with the third annual Let's Celebrate! program, a month-long salute to Yuletide festivities around the world.

Let's Celebrate kicks off with a weekend of activities beginning on Friday, December 4 at 6 p.m. with a traditional tree-lighting ceremony and a special guest appearance by Santa Claus. Entertainment will continue until 9 p.m. featuring the Royal Scottish Country Dancers, singing, Toy Soldiers, Northern Harmony, Epic Brass Quintet, a puppet show by Spring and Marty and the Karen Robbins Trio.

Saturday, December 5 from noon to 4 p.m., Let's Celebrate presents an afternoon of dancing and music by the Children's Ballet Workshop, Conjuncto Folklorico, Lithuanian Dance Club, the New School Woodwind Quintet and dulcimer music by folksinger Gail Rundlett.

The Let's Celebrate! international weekend continues on Sunday, December 6 from noon to 4 p.m. with entertainment by the Kol Yaseh Chorale, Kidsongs by Hugh Hanley, the Appelbo Norwegian Folk Group, B'Yachad Israeli Dancers, Lexington Trio, the Burr Ensemble, and the Clan Sutherland Bagpipe Band.

On December 6 and 7 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., a Science Fair will be held in the Gift shop where there will be demonstrations and explanations of science- related gifts for the entire family. Advisors will be on hand to assist with gift selections for school age children.

Month-long special attractions of the Let's Celebrate! program will be displays of antique dolls, 19th and 20th century toys and games, early models of Flexible Flyer sleds, traditional quilts and quilted wallhangings, a menorah (Hannakuh lamp) display, and Christmas trees decorated according to the customs of as many as 14 nations from around the world.

Let's Celebrate! will also feature family entertainment programs such as "Snowstorms in New England" presented by WBZ weatherman, Bruce Schwoegler, "Tracking and Identifying Animal Pawprints" by naturalists Donald and Lillian Stokes, "Facts and Folklore of the Winter Solstice" and "Bear Tales," a puppet show explaining hibernation habits of bears.

Choral groups and ensembles from area schools will perform each afternoon from 2 to 4 p.m. on Tuesday, December 8 through Friday, December 11. Visitors are invited to drop in to a cabaret-like setting for refreshments to hear the Weston High String Ensemble and Concert Choir, Belmont High Madrigal Singers, Beaver Country Day Choral Groups, Winchester Junior High Select Ensemble, Brookline High Madrigal Singers, Milton High Chorus and the Boston Latin School Concert Choir and Chamber Orchestra.

Tea, cocoa and cookies will be on sale during these performances. There is no additional charge for Let's Celebrate! beyond regular Exhibit Halls admission, $3 for children, $5 for adults. For more information call 589-0100.

Dieting in the holiday season

The words 'holiday' and 'feast' are synonymous in many languages. Religious and family gatherings prompt people to plan, prepare, and consume rich delicacies they do not eat at other times during the year.

Individuals whose diets contain caloric, sodium, sugar, or other restrictions often find holiday periods especially difficult. While others anticipate indulging in overeating and rich foods, they are forced to observe restrictions in order to maintain their health. Although families and friends include them in celebrations, the search for appetizing foods everyone can enjoy can create frustration. As a result, people on restricted diets eat separate meals or are excluded from gatherings which involve eating and drinking.

Pamela Cote, R.D., chief dietitian at Winchester Hospital, says, "Holiday feast planning for restricted diets can be as rewarding as any other type of menu planning. This is a time when most cooks take extra time to plan menus. It is possible to keep 'the old favorites' and make them fit restricted diets. The extra thought required to consider these diets can be especially rewarding."

Anyone who plans to cook for a restricted diet should first consult the ingredient list for a recipe. Most cookbooks have lists of ingredient substitutions which help make food acceptable for restricted diets without altering the taste of the dish.

Low fat yogurt is a good substitute for sour cream and mayonnaise as a topping, thickener, or base for dips.

Vegetables and meats can be cooked and served with broth, salt substitutes, herbs, spices, and flavorings instead of butter, margarine, or creamed sauces.

Bakers may consider substituting whole grain flours for bleached wheat flours in breads, muffins, and special holiday treats.

"In most recipes, far more fat, sugar, and salt are called for than is really needed to cook the food properly. I would suggest cooks try using half the amount and, if that works, try even less the next time they make a recipe," Cote said.

Cote also suggests that anyone preparing holiday menus for persons on restricted diets consider using fresh rather than commercially prepared foods. Fresh foods contain much lower amounts of sodium and other preservatives forbidden by many diets. They can be cooked simply and used in many dishes as garnishes, appetizers, toppings or as replacements for restricted foods. For example, fresh fruit is a refreshing low sugar topping for pound, sponge, or angel cake. Turkey is also an excellent main course which is allowed in most diets.

The dietary staff at Winchester Hospital has developed several recipes acceptable for many restricted diets. They are available in racks in the hospital's lobbies during the holiday season. Individuals who require a consultation about special diets may call Ms. Cote at 729-9000, Ext. 3425 for an appointment.

Spenser Fan Club to meet

SPENCER FAN CLUB

The Judas Goats, a Robert Parker/Spenser Fan Club, will be holding their Annual Spenser Brunch on Sunday, December 6th at the Yangtze River Restaurant in Lexington from 12 to 3 p.m.

This is where Spenser and Paul Giacomin dined in the book Early Autumn. Mr. Parker will attend the brunch which will feature a buffet, raffle and auction. Tickets are $23 for members and $28 for non-members. For tickets call 543-1780.

SENDING JOY VIA MAIL

Mail for Tots needs volunteers to help cheer hundreds of shut-ins this Christmas. If you have an extra greeting card, you can put it to good use. Many of the ill children and adults they list are isolated and lonely. Being a shut- in is especially tough around the Christmas holidays. If you'd like to receive the name and address of a child or adult, who would love to receive your greeting, send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope. Mail that envelope to: MFT Christmas List, 25 New Chardon Street, P.O. Box 8699, Boston, Mass. 02114.

BLUEGRASS UNION

Boston Bluegrass Union presents Dry Branch Fire Squad, also Southern Rail, Sunday, Dec. 6, at 7 p.m. at Dante Alighieri Society Hall, 40 Hampshire St., Cambridge. Refreshments. Tickets $7 in advance (available at Sandy's Music, Cambridge), $8 day of the show. For further information, all 461-1549 or 661-0214.

ONE-MAN FOLK FESTIVAL

John McCutcheon, the Applachian folk singer who has been called a "one- man folk festival," will accompany himself on the hammer dulcimer, autoharp, banjo, guitar, and fiddle in a concert to welcome the winter solstice, on Saturday, December 19, at 8 p.m. in Paine Hall, in the Music Building behind the Harvard Science Center.

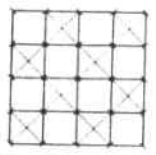

Local favorite Marcia Taylor, a Bright Morning Star, will open the concert. The concert will be interpreted in sign language by Ariel Hall. Paine Hall is wheelchair accessible and has free parking. Tickets: $12.50 in advance, $13.50 at the door. Available at ConcertCharge, Out-of-Town, Sandy's, Wood & Strings, Glad Day, Food for Thought, Arborway Video, Red Bookstore, Somerville Theater.

HIGH TECH GIFTS

Wondering what to buy the techie who has everything? Whether computer- curious or computer-wise, this holiday season you can shop the painless, "glitch-free" way.

Give your feet a rest. Browse through the mail order catalogue which is now available free of charge from The Computer Museum. In fact, what better place to shop for the silicon set than the world's only computer museum?

Geared to the shopper whose core memory has gone dry, the new catalogue features computer-related gifts hand-picked by The Computer Museum Store from among its most popular items. To please the frustrated hacker: everything from the Slide Rule Tie Bar — a Museum exclusive, perfect for the math minded because it's a scaled down version of the real thing, including its own moveable cursor — to the Original Chocolate Byte, a 4.8 ounce piece of chocolate shaped like a disk, great for the computer buff with a sweet tooth.

For the high tech exec, there are handsome mugs and T-shirts — including the Flip/Flop T-shirt — designed especially for the Museum. And for fun, try a Floppy Clock, some blinking computer chip jewelry or the Micro Chess Challenger — the world's only pocket-size chess computer. Not to mention the electronic robot kits or Spinout, the puzzle to try even the brainiest binary experts.

In addition, the catalogue offers the best in other computer-related items — like its Memories, Desperate for Data and Keyboard Prayer posters — and its collection of games, card sets, books and tapes of lectures by some of the great computer pioneers.

The catalogue is available free of charge from: The Computer Museum Store, 300 Congress Street, Boston, Ma. 02210 or call: (617) 426-2800, ext. 307, Monday-Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

As the world's only museum devoted entirely to computers and their impact on society, The Computer Museum has the largest collection of historical computers, with some 50 hands-on exhibits to explore and the best robot show on earth.

Admission and hours: Adults, $4.50, elders and students, $3.50. Half price Friday evenings. Free to Museum members. Open Tuesday-Sunday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Friday until 9 p.m. Public tours every Saturday and Sunday at 1:30 and 3:30 p.m. For recorded information, call the talking computer at (617) 423-6758. Located at Museum Wharf, 300 Congress Street, Boston, Ma. 02210.

Realtor's tips on home selling

You have just been offered the job of your dreams complete with a 30 percent raise, top benefits and flexible hours.

There is just one problem. You have to sell your home quickly to take advantage of the opportunity.

"The conventional wisdom is that to sell a house quickly you have to reduce the price," said Lou D'Angelo, Manager of ERA Olde North Realty in North Reading.

"But brokers who participated in the most recent ERA National Real Estate Poll provided a number of strategies that homeowners and their brokers can use to move the house quickly without slashing the price," D'Angelo said.

Four hundred ERA and non-ERA brokers responded to the telephone survey, which was conducted for ERA Real Estate by Strategic Research of St. Louis. ERA Real Estate is the nation's second largest real estate franchise organization.

Advice from brokers fell into two main categories, D'Angelo said: Tips for the homeowner, and ideas for activities that brokers can undertake on the seller's behalf.

For the homeowner, here were some of the brokers' comments:

—Take care when selecting a broker. Don't just choose a personal friend.

—Negotiate a commission with the broker, providing a bonus for a quick sale.

—Get the house in move-in condition or offer price adjustments for needed repairs.

—Be flexible. Let prospects view the house at night. Be ready to meet the needs of the homebuyers by including or excluding appliances, draperies, and other items.

—Remove unnecessary furniture to make rooms look larger.

—Do cosmetic work to the interior and exterior. Repaint the walls and replace the carpeting, if necessary, preferably in neutral shades.

—Maintain the yard and use attractive landscaping.

"There is no doubt that first impressions count," said D'Angelo. "If a home shows outward signs of neglect, a prospective buyer may instantly question the condition of less visible areas."

Besides the seller's efforts, brokers and sales associates can go "above and beyond' routine methods to sell the home quickly, D'Angelo said.

Serving as a sort of national "brainstorming session" on how to speed up a home sale, the Poll provided tips for brokers:

—Target your marketing

—Offer prospects a home protection plan.

—Be willing to help prospects obtain financing. Have banks look at the property in advance.

ANNA

Short Takes

Anna starring Sally Kirkland, Paulina Porizkova, Robert Fields. Directed by Yurek Bogayevicz. Produced by Zanne Devine and Bogayevicz. Written by Agnieszka Holland. Rated PG-13.

Fear. The fear of aging, of anonymity, of rejection. These are timeless themes we all have to cope with, but which most affect those accustomed to glamour and adoration, like a successful actress.

In Anna, Sally Kirkland plays a middle-aged woman desperately trying to cope with the ravages time brings with it. In the mid-sixties Anna was at the crest of her career. She was the darling of the Czech cinema, married to a famous young director and expecting her first child. But when Russian tanks rolled into the country while her husband was away at a film festival, Anna was thrown into jail as a political prisoner for speaking out against the new government.

Accepting a permanent exile upon her release rather than denounce her beliefs, Anna headed for New York, where she planned to join her husband and rebuild her career. Things just didn't quite work out as she hoped. Her husband divorced her, wanting no sad reminders of his past while America didn't seem to want, or care about, yet another actress, talented or not.

This tragic background is what makes Anna the fragile creature she is. Thanks to Kirkland's brilliant performance, we learn that Anna is still filled with passion and rage, although she's becoming depleted of the strength that once filled her. But she lets you occasionally peek into her past at the beautiful and unique woman she was when 20 years of sadness hadn't eaten away at her.

As the film opens, Anna befriends a shabby refugee, played adroitly by international model Paulina Porizkova. This kerchiefed Czech girl has arrived in New York clutching a photo of the young Anna amid her few belongings. As Anna has been reduced to pathetic posturing by an arrogant director just to get a meager job in the theatre, she welcomes this awkward immigrant, Krystina. Offering her a place to stay and her friendship, Anna is rewarded by the blind admiration she so yearns for.

It is here that the film becomes reminiscent of "All About Eve," with Porizkova playing Anne Baxter's Eve to Kirkland's Betty Davis. Anna teaches Krystina English, how to flirt, how to get a job. But her pupil is no slouch. She quickly figures out that capping your teeth and being particularly friendly to directors will help one find one's cinematic way.

It is as Krystina begins her ascent that Anna begins to crumble. And it is here that Kirkland's performance attains an Oscar-winning level. We see her strength become hysteria, her fortitude turn into a numbing anger that allows the irrational to superimpose the rational. Kirkland manages to call up the raw emotion you'd expect from someone no longer able to adapt to a life they never wanted anyway.

The dialogue, especially in the quiet moments, is startlingly true to life. As Anna and Krystina laze around, and Anna divulges her past in halting whispers, or when Krystina reads her letters home and reveals a searing insight into American culture, you feel like you are eavesdropping, listening in on real women in an actual situation.

While the story is engrossing, and Porizkova makes a strong showing in her first role, this is Kirkland's vehicle. And the amazing thing is that she gives the performance of the year, and the best in her career, all the while managing a tricky Czech accent with complete credulity.

Short Takes

Three Men and a Baby is an effervescent remake of the leaden French flick, Three Men and a Cradle. Tom Selleck has regained his cinematic reputation as the gentle, caring, coping leader of three roommates who are suddenly saddled with a baby girl. As long as you don't ask too many sensible questions — like why three successful guys in their late thirties are all living together — this will go down as easy as a Gerber dessert. Rated PG * * *

Planes, Trains and Automobiles certainly has its funny moments. How could it not, with Steve Martin and John Candy as two hapless travelers thrown together while trying to get home for Thanksgiving? But John Hughes, who wrote, produced and directed, just let the film ramble out of control. Yeah, the sight gags are great, but a real ending would have been better. Rated R. * *

Anna is a lush film made indelible by the strong performance of Sally Kirkland as a has-been actress trying to cope with anonymity. Not helping her much is the beautiful refugee who comes into her life, played adroitly by model Paulina Porizkova. This is an engrossing, intelligent story that will stick in your mind and give you something to think about. Rated PG-13. * * * ½

IN HER MOST PROVOCATIVE and challenging role to date, two-time Academy Award-winner Barbra Streisand stars in Warner Bros.' powerful and emotion-charged drama "Nuts" as a strong-willed woman who launches a fierce battle to prove her mental competence.

Nuts allows Barbra Streisand a tour de force performance as a prostitute up on a murder rap who may or may not be crazy, and not even her shrink knows for sure. Helping her fight for the right to be prosecuted as a sane person is public defender Richard Dreyfuss. And while everything is just a little too slick, and Barbra looks a little too good with all that soft backlighting, this is a gut-wrenching film full of nasty black humor. Rated R. * * * ½

Suspect is an inane mystery so devoid of thrills and makes so little sense that you wonder why Cher and Dennis Quaid bothered. Don't you. Rated R. *

Hope and Glory is John Boorman's remembrance of a childhood spent in an England where dropping bombs and air raids didn't deter him from having a wonderful time. Upbeat and often slyly funny, Boorman reminds us that even for people living with the constant reminder of their mortality, life goes on. Rated PG. * * * *

The Running Man is a gritty, futuristic tale about a violent society as written by Steven King under the name Richard Bachman. Arnold Schwarzenegger stars as a convict given a chance to redeem himself by appearing on a game show where the prizes are of a life or death caliber. Richard Dawson plays a game show host you'll just love to hate. Rated R. * * *

Hello Again is about a boring housewife (Shelley Long) who comes back to life, thanks to the spells and antics of her nutty sister (Judith Ivey). Unfortunately, the story isn't much more exciting than Long's character, and the whole thing unwinds in a silly spiral as Long learns about true love the second time around. Too bad Ivey wasn't the one to come back — she carries the movie as it is. Rated PG. * ½

Baby Boom is a conventional comedy that plays by the numbers and should really have been called Baby Bust. Diane Keaton looks and acts better than she has in years, but she could have found a better vehicle than this Yuppie tribute to motherhood. The film ends up sending a muddled message about women being able to "have it all" but if you can't even laugh at the jokes, how can you buy the sentiment? Rated PG. * ½

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

Woodchips fan clubs are springing up in many Middlesex East cities and towns. Contact the following for membership: Robert (Bobby) Burns (affectionately known as Father Burns) in the Woburn area; Wayne Higden and Father John Crispo in Burlington; Connie Johnson or Bill Cerretani at Honeycomb in Wakefield; Joe Bianchi, Jimmy Geary and Carol McLaughlin in Lynnfield; Frank Mazzoni and Fred Neilson in Wilmington; Joe and Patricia Foley in Tewksbury; John Ridings and Paula Fairfield in North Reading; Jim Curley, Bob Skelley and Arthur Marino in Stoneham; Don Young and Tracey Heenan in Reading and Stephen Connolly, Jimmy Duff and Paul Brennan of Winchester. The only requirement is that you have a keen sense of humor.

George Guyette called me and said, "I don't want to join your stupid fan club. Furthermore, I'll pay you not to mention my name in your column. I read Woodchips every week just to see what nutty jokes you have like — Abraham Lincoln built the log cabin that he was born in. Without any doubt at least one of your parents must have been a 'weight lifter' for they sure raised a 'dumb-bell!' "

George, may I humbly suggest that you join my Aunt Nina's club. She hates Woodchips, but I love her — you and everyone — readers or not. Jim DiNova said to me, "Cows may come and cows may go, but the 'bull' in Woodchips goes on forever." Thanks Jimmy, I appreciate that.

Tommy Cook and his mother were looking at a family album. In one photo a handsome young man with dark wavy hair was in the picture. "Who is that?" Tommy asked. "That's your father." "Oh, yeah." exclaimed the skeptical young man, "Then who is that bald-headed guy smoking a pipe in the livingroom?" Handsome Johnny McCurtin of Wilmington ran home to tell his parents, John and Jane. that he was the best boy in his class. "Did Sister Victor tell you that?" Jane asked. "No, she didn't have to, I found that out myself." Thatta boy, Johnny. His two beautiful sisters are super students and athletes. Charlene attends St. Rose School and Stacey attends Pope John in Everett.

Personality Winners: Jimmy Bruce, Everett Scott, Michele Funicella, Carol and Eleanor Kelley, Susan Otolo, Jerry Small, Lt. Dave Walsh, Tony Chiralla, Sharon Haggerty, Pam MacKill, Patricia Millward (dedicated Girl Scout leader), Ken Binding, Terry O'Reilly (Bruins' coach), Michael and Warren Myers and Ann and Dave O'Donnell.

Many of you know how difficult it is sometimes to get catsup out of a bottle. the only thing that seems to work is to hold the bottle upside-down with one hand and whack the bottom with the palm of the other hand. Mike Gaffney's mother was doing just that when the door bell rang. "Go see who is at the door Michael." It was Father Murray looking for donations for the upcoming church rummage sale. "Where's your mother?" he asked. "Oh," replied Mike, as he smiled from ear to ear, "she's in the kitchen doing a great job at 'hitting the bottle.' "

Karen Burnett, lovely daughter of Bruce and Barbara Burnett of Reading, is attending New Hampshire State College majoring in Sports Medicine. That was my best subject when I was the water boy on my high school football team years ago. I spiked the water bucket with some of my father's home-made hooch. I venture to guess that there hasn't been another football team that has ever played with more 'vim, vigor or spirit!'

Effective communication is letting other people know exactly what you mean, think or feel. A blacksmith picked up a red-hot iron from the forge, then placed it on an anvil. He then shouted to his not too bright helper, "Pick up that 16 pound sledge hammer and when I nod my head, hit it!" If we talk that way we better consider wearing cast iron hard hats. An airline pilot was flying over the Tennessee mountains and pointed out a lake to his co-pilot. "See that little lake down there? Well, when I was a kid I used to sit in a little rowboat and fish. Everytime a plane would fly overhead I'd look up and wish that I was up there flying it. Now, as I look down, I wish I was in a rowboat, fishing!"

Folks, have you seen any flag pole sitters lately? I'm not kidding. During the Depression they were here, there and everywhere. Someone named Shipwreck Kelly held the endurance record of 28 days sitting on top of a flag pole. The purpose of that so-called nutty sport was the same as Woodchips — to help people forget their troubles and laugh. If things go wrong and you cry, then you have already lost. But if things go wrong and you try, then folks, you have already won. Sometimes marriage is not a word — it's a sentence!

Woodchips congratulates Attorney Renee Henning, duaghter of Dr. Michael Scarpitto (retired superintendent of Stoneham public schools) and Mrs. Scarpitto. Renee was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States in ceremonies conducted in Washington, D.C.; Anne P. Glavin, recently named chief of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology campus police department, is a first grade teacher at Robin Hood School in Stoneham and Nancy Kerrigan of Stoneham, who won the New England Senior Ladies' Figure Skating Championship at the Skating Club of Boston.

Woodchips also congratulates Arthur Hartung, a Woburn High School business course teacher, who was inducted into the Park League Hall of Fame. Arthur's illustrious baseball career included two tremendous home runs — one a 550 footer and the other 580 feet — both hit at Dorchester Town Field. Also, Lawrence Nice of North Reading, recently ordained into the Christian ministry at the First Baptist Church; North Reading Deputy Fire Chief Ralph Sweetland Jr. and Firefighter Dave Slade for rescuing 10-year-old Peter Smith and his companion, 12-year-old Craig Popp when their canoe capsized in the Ipswich River.

Congratulations to Karen DeFronzo for receiving the first Morton D. Weiner Scholarship Award from the Guaranty-First Bank. Karen's father, Pasquale DeFronzo of Wilmington, is vice president of the Mortgage Division at Guaranty-First Bank. And Patricia Millward, a personal friend of Woodchips who is well known in the Wilmington-Tewksbury area. Pat is a dynamic person, a veritable human dynamo. She is a driving force in the Girl Scouts of America and served as Scout Master for many years. From personal observation, I know that Pat believes in service without reward, charity without questions and love for all of God's creatures. As I said at the heading of this chip, Woodchips contratulates all of you wonderful people.

Folks, life without TV can be beautiful. We discovered that at my house last week when our TV set 'bit the dust.' My family learned the art of conversing again instead of hearing, "Shhhh, I'm watching TV." Even my golden retriever likes it better this way, she is getting more attention. I couldn't go to work one day two weeks ago because of the 5½ inches of 'partly cloudy' in my driveway. Angelo Quagenti (an upholsterer) was sick last week, but I'm happy to tell you that he has 'recovered' nicely. My wife Kathy went to the beauty parlor last week and for three days she looked beautiful — then the 'mud' fell off.

Thank Heaven for Little Boys

A cyclone hit the bedroom
Clothes are on the floor.
Larry Bird's poster is taped to the closet door.

The living room chairs and sofa are sagging with wear
And the refrigerator shelves are almost always bare.

The bathroom is always busy
There's water everywhere.
The time spent in the shower
Just really isn't fair.

Our house is full of gloves and balls
And never ending noise.
I know you must have guessed it
We have a family of boys.

Safe tips on home insulation

The leaves has fallen, thus signaling the time for homeowners across the country to weatherize their homes, says Karen McCarthy, Relocation Director of Wintergreen Properties.

"Weatherizing your home — whether you live in a warm or cold weather climate — can help you save money on your energy bills. Thermal windows, weather stripping and insulation can prevent the loss of heat and cooling — but be very careful not to over insulate," says McCarthy whose company is a member of RELO®/Inter-City Relocation Service, the nation's oldest and largest referral network of independent real estate brokers headquartered in Chicago.

McCarthy says, "Every homeowner would like to save money on energy bills. Insulating is a good way to acheive this goal — but over-insulating can prove harmful to your family.

Wintergreen Properties, as a member of the RELO network, is active in dealing with corporate transferees and other individuals and their families relocating from cold climates to such areas as the Sun Belt and vice versa. She adds, "Unfortunately these families sometimes react to the new climate by over-protecting their homes."

Some of the more harmful pollutants that can possibly build up in an over-insulated home are radon, carbon monoxide, formaldehyde, nitrogen dioxide, respirable particles and ashes, she explains, and all of these can be dangerous to your health and home.

How can a family possibly conserve energy and avoid health risks?

There is not a single set solution to avoid health risks, but here are a few precautions a family can take and still be energy conscious, adds McCarthy. They include: Occasionally airing out your home to clear out the buildup of harmful pollutants and installing filtering equipment and ventilating systems to provide clean and safe air in your home.

McCarthy adds, "We urge all homeowners to be careful and take precautions when weatherizing their homes. It is possible to be safe and still conserve energy."

McCarthy notes that the RELO Service network, of which Wintergreen is a member, is composed of nearly 1,200-member companies with more than 3,400-member offices nationwide and abroad and stands ready to provide personalized services to transferring families.

Wintergreen has two offices and over 25 sales associates and has been servicing the Greater Derry area for many years.

Mass. Nurses select Kathleen Beyerman, delegate

The Massachusetts Nurses Association has selected Kathleen Beyerman, B.S., M.S., director of Education at Winchester Hospital to serve as a delegate to two upcoming conventions.

In June 1988, she will attend the American Nurses Association Convention in Louisville, Ky. Later, during 1989, she will attend the House of Delegates in Kansas City, Mo.

As one of 34 delegates representing nurses in Massachusetts, she will be responsible for voting on resolutions concerning social and economic influences on health care, political positions, and priorities of the association during both of the two-day meetings.

Merrimack College tree lighting

Merrimack College invites its neighbors, friends and alumni from the Merrimack Valley to be the college's guests again this year for the lighting of the Merrimack College Christmas tree.

For the seventh consecutive year, Rev. John E. Deegan, O.S.A., president of Merrimack College, and the entire college community will host the tree lighting ceremony on Sunday, Dec. 6, beginning at 4:30 p.m. Again this year, the program is made possible through a grant from BayBank Merrimack Valley.

The festivities will begin at 4:30 p.m. with music, readings and the lighting of the college's Christmas tree outside the Collegiate Church of Christ the Teacher. A selection of Christmas music will be performed by the Merrimack College Chorale, under the direction of Dr. Joseph Kelley. Old St. Nick himself is also expected to make an appearance during the tree lighting ceremony.

Following the tree lighting, refreshments will be served in the church auditorium. The College Chorale will also perform a selection of Christmas music during the reception.

"This annual tree lighting and concert is Merrimack's Christmas gift to our neighbors and friends in the region," Father Deegan said. "We especially hope that families with their children will come to Merrimack for a joy-filled, entertaining evening to begin the Christmas season in New England."

The tree-lighting program is being coordinated by the Student Activities Center and the Merrimack College Class of 1991.
